

Pretoria to end state of emergency

JOHANNESBURG. — President Pieter Botha yesterday announced the imminent lifting of the partial state of emergency and said the process of granting independence to Namibia could start by August 1.

He told a joint session of the three houses of parliament in Cape Town that the situation had improved sufficiently for the state of emergency, imposed last July to curb rioting in the black townships, to be lifted probably by Friday.

Two hours before Botha's announcement, an explosion rocked the heavily-guarded police headquarters in the heart of Johannesburg, injuring two policemen and two passersby. No one took responsibility for the blast, one of the most spectacular strikes yet at an institution of the white-minority regime.

Botha coupled his announcement with an appeal for the peaceful settlement of the political differences in South Africa, and raised for the first time the possibility of a new constitution negotiated with the black majority.

"All South Africans who denounce violence can come to the

BULLETIN

By YEHUDA LITANI

Uri Avnery, editor of Ha'Olam Hazeh was last night reported to be in Amman, where he held talks with Jordanian and Palestinian leaders.

Avnery's wife Rachel told The Jerusalem Post last night that Avnery had flown to Amman from Cairo. He is due to return this morning via the Alkeny Bridge.

The last Israeli to have visited Amman, journalist Amnon Kapelink, was tried on his return, found guilty, and fined.

conference table in order to jointly negotiate a new constitutional dispensation," he said.

Botha said a Namibian settlement could be reached if South Africa could negotiate "a firm and satisfactory agreement" on Cuban withdrawal from Angola. He described his proposal as "a serious attempt" to reach a settlement on the Namibian independence issue in terms of United Nations Resolution 435.

South Africa, as well as the U.S., had up to now linked any application of the UN plan to withdrawal of the Cubans, said to number around 30,000.

Botha's announcement on the state of emergency and Namibia got a swift welcome in Washington. Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said one of the State Department's top African experts, Frank Wisner, would go immediately to the region to consult governments on the "significant and positive step in the negotiations to achieve Namibia's independence." (AFP, Reuters)

HU law dean said to be front-runner for Zamir's job

By BARBARA AMOUYAL

For the Jerusalem Post Prof. Yitzhak Engelhard, dean of the Hebrew University Law School, is considered the front-running candidate to replace Attorney-General Yitzhak Zamir, who announced his resignation on February 11. It is up to Justice Minister Moshe Nissim to recommend a successor.

Well-informed political sources say Engelhard, an Orthodox man of no known political allegiance, is viewed as an ideal candidate for the often controversial job.

Engelhard, who was first informed of his possible appointment by The Jerusalem Post, said he was flattered, but declined to comment further.

Nissim neither confirmed nor denied that he was considering Engelhard for the job. He said that he had narrowed down his list of candidates to three, and promised that a decision would be made in the next few weeks.

King Hassan of Morocco is this week celebrating 25 years on the throne. He is seen here (right) with visiting King Juan Carlos of Spain on their way to the royal palace in Marrakesh. (AFP)

Taba talks resume in Cairo as quiet returns

By ABRAHAM RABINOVICH
CAIRO. — The resumption of talks between Israel and Egypt here yesterday, less than a week after the outbreak of the Egyptian police mutiny, signalled that Egypt is at least at peace with itself.

Both sides believed last week that the scheduled talks would have to be postponed. But the Egyptian army's quick suppression of Taba, and normalization of the mutiny permitted Cairo to inform Jerusalem over the weekend that the talks were on.

"We are relating to this as a normal continuation of our talks, as if nothing has happened here," said Avraham Tamir, head of the Israeli delegation before the meeting got underway.

The one concession to the security situation was the shifting of the venue from the opulent Mena House Hotel at the foot of the pyramids to the more stolid surroundings of the El-Salaam Hotel near the airport. The pyramid area was the focus of the police rampage which led to the destruction of a number of luxury hotels.

On Sunday, the Mena House maintenance staff was busy repairing a revolving door at the hotel entrance and a mirror in the lobby, the only objects damaged by the mutineers, in anticipation of hosting

(Continued on back page)

Levy-Sharon alliance criticized

Anger in Herut over Arens's 'Mafia' remark

By SARAH HONIG and BENNY MORRIS
Jerusalem Post Reporters

TEL AVIV. — Deputy Premier David Levy lashed out at Minister-without-Portfolio Arens last night at a gathering of his supporters here. Levy wanted to know if "Arens considers himself Don Corleone, as he would have to confer with the mobster who gets elected to lead the party."

With about a thousand of his supporters cheering him on, Levy thundered to an absent Arens: "In what faculty did Arens learn about the mafia? I know you are a learned professor, and I know that all of your degrees were gained in prestigious universities, but did you learn about the mafia there?"

He charged that "for a much lesser insult — the use of the term 'chabchachim' (a pejorative term for Sephardi Jews) Labour lost the 1981 elections, and here is Arens branding a whole segment of Herut as gangsters." Levy charged that Arens couldn't "very well speak out against factionalism in Herut at a time when he himself heads a faction."

Reacting to all this, Arens last night issued a statement saying that he "will continue the battle against factional groupings in Herut for fear of the damage they cause the party. I am convinced that I voice the feelings of most of the convention delegates who are fed up with factional hostilities, contests for power and ad hoc alliances. I am sure I am speaking for all those who hunger for party unity."

Foreign Minister and Likud leader Yitzhak Shamir tried to cool tempers, saying he regretted the statement.

Speaking before a gathering of Young Herut in Jerusalem, Shamir said he would "speak to Arens" about the matter.

The thrust of Shamir's hour-long speech was an appeal to the members to tone down their differences and not engage in noisy jousting which would enable the press and Herut's rivals to highlight the party's "failures and errors." Herut must "disappoint" its rivals, said Shamir.

Arens told reporters in Ashkelon that "the various alliances between factions in the party are anti-democratic. Competitions for the leadership are fully legitimate, but the number of groups ganging up against others is a practice more in line with what is acceptable for the Mafia than for a political party."

Sharon branded Arens's comment "unnecessary and damaging." He went on: "His style is not the sort we should have at a time when efforts are being made to prevent acrimony and clashes at the convention. I will not stoop to this manner of speech. After all, for weeks now I have been active in efforts to achieve an internal peace agreement in the party."

Levy supporters noted that Arens

(Continued on back page)

Eleven executed in Hizbollah 'divine reprisal'

BEIRUT (AFP). — The Hizbollah ("Party of God") this week published the names of 11 people it had "executed according to divine prescription" in reprisals for a car-bombing in West Beirut last March that killed 75 people and injured 256.

After publishing the names and photographs of the 11, nine men and two women — Christians and Muslims — Hizbollah used a television station run by the Shi'ite Amal movement to broadcast purported confessions from the 11.

The bomb, the party said, had been intended to kill Hizbollah's spiritual leader, Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah. The 11 people executed had been members of a "satanic trinity," a section of Lebanese military intelligence that cooperated with Israeli and U.S. intelligence.

Although it was Hizbollah's first public announcement of such an action since it came into the headlines in 1982, it was the latest in a month-long series of apparent steps to draw public attention to the party's growing strength.

Hizbollah members are the core of the "Islamic Resistance" which said it had been responsible for abducting the two Israeli soldiers in South Lebanon on February 17.

Late last month, the Hizbollah abducted 50 members of a Communist group in Beirut.

An analyst for the Beirut newspaper An Nahar says that no security plan for West Beirut can be enforced without Hizbollah's approval.

Judge orders assets attached Jerusalem electric workers interfere with court bailiffs

Jerusalem Post Staff
Jerusalem District Electric Company workers yesterday scuffled with Israeli bailiffs and called on West Bank residents and "Arab brethren abroad" to prevent the firm from falling into Israeli hands.

The bailiffs had been sent to the East Jerusalem firm by the Jerusalem District Court, which earlier in the day approved a request from the Israel Electric Corporation for attachment of the firm's assets. The IEC, which sells the East Jerusalem company 90 per cent of its electricity, says the JDEC owes it NIS 16 million, and efforts over the past 18 months to collect the debt have been to no avail.

The workers at first prevented the bailiffs from entering the premises. But after the intervention of the firm's attorney, Shlomo Toussia-Cohen, the bailiffs were allowed to enter and evaluate and mark the company's equipment.

The bailiffs office later said it would give the JDEC three weeks before seizing its property, because the firm had promised to pay its debt by that time.

At a meeting of the firm's union last night, the workers called a partial strike to begin today.

The union said the strike would not affect the supply of electricity to the company's customers.

The workers would not cooperate with any Israeli body that tried to seize the company's assets, the union declared.

West Bank and East Jerusalem residents consider the company a symbol of Palestinian nationalism, and the court order is likely to raise tension between residents and the Israeli authorities. The PLO is likely to mobilize its supporters to protest against the court decision. And this, along with the break between Jordan's King Hussein and the PLO, will probably strengthen the PLO's position in the territories.

"Since we had intended to pay our debts, the court decision must be seen as an unnecessary attempt to embarrass us," Anwar Nusseibeh, chairman of the company's board, said last night. "We are determined to continue dealing with the case through judicial channels, and we have instructed our attorneys," he added.

The IEC spokesman said that during the past year the IEC had supplied 340 million kilowatt-hours of power to the Jerusalem company, or more than 90 per cent of the electricity the Jerusalem company supplies to its consumers. Its demand has been steadily increasing because of the population growth in its concession area, he noted.

The Energy Ministry spokesman told The Jerusalem Post yesterday: "The ministry's role is to ensure a proper supply of power to all parts of the country. It does not intervene in litigation between companies, even if one of more of them are state corporations."

Big rescue operation to save ailing firms

The crisis threatening to bring down some of the country's largest firms and public bodies intensified yesterday, with the government, the Bank of Israel and the commercial banks involved in a hectic series of rescue operations.

The debt crisis now affecting most of the country's business sector and the Histadrut's Kupat Holim Clalit health fund has already forced the government to intervene. It appears that about 5,000 workers will lose their jobs as recovery plans are implemented. Debts to commercial banks will be wiped out. The government will approve the issuing of bonds to finance the rescheduling of short term debts.

The rescue operations will also give the banks a larger say in running the firms and public bodies concerned, and the banks will closely monitor implementation.

Zim: State to get control

Jerusalem Post Staff

The Israel Corporation yesterday informed the Securities Authority that it had decided to transfer its share of the Zim shipping company to the government, thus giving the government 90 per cent control of the company and saddling it with Zim's $456 million debt.

The corporation's board decided on Monday to transfer its 50 per cent share of Zim to the government or to any government-selected body. The transfer requires the approval of the Ministerial Economic Committee and the Knesset Finance Committee.

If the transfer is approved, the government, which now holds 40 per cent of Zim, would own 90 per cent of the company. The Histadrut owns the remaining 10 per cent.

Under the present arrangement, the government and the corporation share liability for Zim's debt, which was $456m. at the end of 1985. By giving its shares to the government, the Israel Corporation is relieving itself of this burden and placing it in the government's lap.

Government sources said yesterday that it would seek a buyer for most of its shares in Zim as soon as possible.

Zim lost $45m. in 1984, but was expected to break even or show a small profit on its current operations for 1985.

The Israel Corporation also announced a major shift in management, effective April. Menahem Atzmon has resigned as general manager, and will be replaced by his deputy Aharon Zeller. Atzmon will continue to serve as a member of the board.

Elsclint: Peres steps in

By PINHAS LANDAU
Post Finance Reporter

In one of Israel's most dramatic and complex financial rescue operations, Prime Minister Shimon Peres has intervened to save Elsclint from being overwhelmed by its debt problems.

Following an emergency meeting on Monday between Peres, Finance Minister Yitzhak Moda'i, Bank of Israel governor Dr. Moshe Mandelbaum, Elsclint chairman Uzia Galil and top level management of the commercial banks, a package of rescue measures is being worked out.

Sources in the banking sector and in the company expect the details of these measures to be finalized very soon, possibly even today, after which a series of formal announcements will be made by the parties involved.

The Jerusalem Post has learned that the background to Monday's meeting was the growing tendency of Elsclint's bankers to regard the company's debt problem from their own viewpoint.

In this respect, given the numerous major problems pressing them, and their inability to grant new loans or reschedule old ones because of the tight monetary policy in force, the banks had decided to opt for the closure of Elsclint, even at the price of writing off the $180 million owed them by the company.

The Monday meeting was called by Peres at the behest of Galil. The bankers were treated to an impassioned speech by the prime minister in which he called Elsclint "a major national asset." He went on to stress the company's "flagship" role in the development of high-technology industries and exports. Moda'i and Mandelbaum fully supported Peres's approach and also dwelt on the impact Elsclint had made abroad and the good name it had acquired for Israeli hi-tech.

From the point of view of Israel's exports, replacing a firm that generated $10m. monthly of export income would be difficult, if not impossible.

The message to the bankers was that Elsclint could not be treated as

(Continued on back page)

A plan for Kupat Holim

Jerusalem Post Staff

The huge debt accumulated by the Histadrut health fund Kupat Holim Clalit — close to $525 million — has reached intolerable proportions. To stabilize the fund it will be necessary to reschedule debts, sell off Kupat Holim's assets, increase borrowing in Israel and abroad, raise members' fees and payments and cut staff.

These are the main conclusions reached by Ya'acov Gadish, who was appointed by the Histadrut and the government to examine the fund's financial situation.

Gadish, former head of the Treasury's budget division, warns that if no steps are taken to solve the fund's troubled situation, the burden will fall on the public. He presented his report yesterday to Prime Minister Peres and Finance Minister Moda'i.

Reacting to the report, Histadrut Secretary-General Yisrael Kessar said the labour federation would

(Continued on back page)

WHAT DO YOU DO WHEN YOU REACH THE OVERDRAFT CEILING AT YOUR BANK?

Kether Barak

YOU ALSO NEED AN IMPROVED CURRENT ACCOUNT AT FIRST INTERNATIONAL BANK

IMPROVED CURRENT ACCOUNT

(Osh Meshupar) — When you exceed your overdraft ceiling in your bank, you'll be charged high penalty interest. If you open an IMPROVED CURRENT ACCOUNT at First International Bank, you can benefit from an additional NIS 1500* overdraft at low interest and with no penalty interest. What's more, you won't pay administrative banking fees on transactions such as: buying or selling TAFAS (demand deposit) and PAKAM (fixed-term deposit), shares, foreign currency, check and cash deposits, cash withdrawals from bank automats, etc. The conclusion is clear: You need an additional account. You need an IMPROVED CURRENT ACCOUNT.

*Granting of credit is subject to receiving the appropriate securities required by the Bank.

ALSO OPENED AN ACCOUNT WITH FIRST INTERNATIONAL BANK.

IPO public council vetoes Auschwitz concert

By MARK SEGAL

Jerusalem Post Reporter
TEL AVIV. — The Israel Philharmonic Orchestra's public council met in emergency session at the end of last week and unanimously condemned music director Zubin Mehta's intention of taking the orchestra to Poland next month. The Jerusalem Post has learned.

Controversy about the tour blew up last month when it was reported that Mehta intended to have the IPO play a memorial concert at Auschwitz. The controversy took on a new dimension when it was learned that the tour was to take place at the same time as the orchestra had contracted to perform four concerts with the finalists of the Arthur Schnitzler International Piano Contest in Israel.

Mehta reportedly accepted Poland's invitation to bring the IPO there without consulting the IPO's administration. IPO secretary Avi Shoshani has already left for Poland to make final arrangements for the tour.

Amnon Goldenberg, a past president of the Israel Bar Association and a member of the IPO public council, proposed at the council's meeting on Friday that Mehta not be allowed to break the $80,000 IPO contract with the Rubinstein contest organizers. The council, which is chaired by former Supreme Court Justice Felix Landau, approved this motion, adding that the IPO should fulfill Mehta's commitment to the Poland tour only if "an agreed alternative" could be found for the concerts with the contest's finalists.

Zubin Mehta (Andre Brutmam)

The only other orchestra that could perhaps host the contestants would be the Jerusalem Symphony Orchestra, but the JSO has reportedly made very large financial demands for any re-arrangement of its schedule. The piano contest committee, which is this year marking the centenary of Rubinstein's birth, is to hold a press conference today to announce details of the biennial event. The chairman of the committee is former MK Zalman Shoval.

Earlier, Education Minister Yitzhak Navon wrote a sharply worded note to the IPO, urging it to honour its contract with the contest organizers. Then, after receiving a call from Mehta, Navon reportedly backtracked, and told senior officials to resolve the matter. Ministry sources say that the PO management misinformed Navon, telling him that the tour to Poland had Prime Minister Peres's backing. But Peres's bureau director Boe Appelbaum told The Post this wasn't true.

The weather at major Swissair destinations

	4.3.86	MIN.	MAX.
AMSTERDAM	-1	2	3	Clear
BRUSSELS	-1	2	3	Clear
BUENOS AIRES	-1	2	3	Clear
CHICAGO	-1	2	3	Clear
COLOGNE	-1	2	3	Clear
FRANKFURT	-1	2	3	Clear
GENEVA	-1	2	3	Clear
HAMBURG	-1	2	3	Clear
JERUSALEM	-1	2	3	Clear
LONDON	-1	2	3	Clear
MADRID	-1	2	3	Clear
MUNICH	-1	2	3	Clear
NEW YORK	-1	2	3	Clear
PARIS	-1	2	3	Clear
ROME	-1	2	3	Clear
ST. PAUL	-1	2	3	Clear
STOCKHOLM	-1	2	3	Clear
TORONTO	-1	2	3	Clear
ZURICH	-1	2	3	Clear

*For the latest weather conditions contact Swissair.

Tel Aviv, 41 Ben Yehuda St. (03) 243350
Jerusalem, 30 Jaffa St. (02) 225233
Haifa, 2 Sea Road (04) 384655
Beer Sheva, 38 Ha'atzi St. (05) 32282

swissair

THE WEATHER

Forecast: Drop in temperatures, rise in humidity. Chance of showers tomorrow.

	Yesterday's	Yesterday's	Today's
	High/Low	High/Low	High/Low
Jerusalem	16/10	15/10	15
Golan	34	11-20	15
Nahariya	49	13-23	18
Safed	36	13-19	13
Haifa Port	24	11-25	19
Tiberias	40	11-23	19
Nazareth	41	14-24	16
Afula	26	11-26	19
Shomron	19	12-24	17
Tel Aviv	20	13-26	19
B-G Airport	21	12-26	20
Jericho	41	14-25	32
Gaza	27	14-25	18
Beersheba	15	12-26	19
Eilat	29	12-27	24

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

Haifa Mayor Arye Gurel yesterday held a reception for visiting San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein at city hall. U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering was among the guests.

The Haifa Rotary Club will hold a business meeting in the Nof Hotel at 1 p.m. today.

Avi Passner, spokesman of the Foreign Ministry, will speak on "Israel's Image in the World Media" at the weekly meeting of the Jerusalem Rotary Club at the YMCA at 1 p.m. today.

Finnish FM to visit

Finnish Foreign Minister Paavo Vayrynen is to discuss the role of Unifil and bilateral relations when he arrives for a three-day official visit on March 13.

Vayrynen will be the first Finnish foreign minister to visit Israel.

Shultz: We bent over backwards for the PLO

By WOLF BLITZER

WASHINGTON. - Secretary of State George Shultz yesterday said that the U.S. and Jordan and others had "bent over backwards" to give Yasser Arafat and the PLO a chance to get involved in a new round of Arab-Israeli peace negotiations.

But during testimony before the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Foreign Operations, Shultz lamented that "in the end, the PLO leadership would not move."

The secretary, who went to Capitol Hill to defend the administration's new worldwide foreign aid proposal, discussed in some detail the most recent collapse of the peace initiative, underscored by King Hussein's speech late last month.

And while the secretary again promised to continue the effort, other U.S. officials privately conceded that the current prospects for getting any serious negotiating process off the ground were remote.

In recalling the most recent U.S. and Jordanian overtures to the PLO, the secretary confirmed that the U.S. would have been willing to invite the PLO to an international conference if it had renounced violence, accepted "the fact that Israel is there and is there to stay," and accepted UN Security Council Resolutions 242 and 338.

He said the U.S. had discussed with Hussein various sorts of international conferences. In that context, he said the U.S. had been ready to go along with an invitation to the PLO to participate in such a conference "but not beyond that."

Rafael Marinov, 81

TEL AVIV (Itim). - Rafael Marinov, who was general manager of Hamashir LeZachan for 30 years, died here yesterday at 81.

Marinov came to Palestine as a pioneer, worked for many years for Hadassah Hospital in Jerusalem, and was one of the founders of consumer cooperatives. He leaves a daughter and two sons, one of whom is Dr. Uri Marinov, director of the Environmental Protection Service.

LOTTO. - The following numbers were picked in yesterday's Lotto drawing: 2, 18, 20, 22, 24, 28, and the additional number 29.

HOME NEWS

Technion physicist Arnon Dar: 'Star Wars' likely to weaken world security

By YA'ACOV FRIEDLER
Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. - The case against Israel joining "Star Wars," President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, was put to Technion students yesterday by physicist Arnon Dar.

He proposed that individual scientists or firms - but not the country as a whole - might join. But, he added: "If I were asked to, I would decline."

Dar argued that the project would weaken world security, especially while it is being developed, as the other side would not simply stand by "and the deck is stacked in favour of the attacker."

To provide energy for the powerful X-ray lasers envisaged, nuclear devices would have to be put into space increasing the danger of a nuclear accident, he asserted.

Even if the system could shoot down missiles, the plutonium each H-bomb contained would presumably be released, covering large areas with radio-active pollution, he said.

As for the advantages of participation, he doubted that there was "much in it" for Israel. The U.S. was not likely to spend more than "small change" on research here and nor would it pass on classified information to our scientists.

The project will not be a serious contribution to our technological position because we will be entrusted only with marginal components," he forecast.

On the other hand, our scientists would be passing their know-how to America "and, for a small investment, the U.S. will be able to gather information it could not otherwise obtain."

Israel would be in good company in refusing to join the project, said Dor. Canada and some of the European allies have said no, while in the U.S. 54 of the 56 Nobel Prize laureates in physics and 700 members of the American Academy of Sciences, have signed petitions against the project.

While Israel stood to gain a few million dollars, "the enormous cost of the project may force the U.S. to cut down its foreign aid, which would cost us much more," Dar said.

Above all he objected to the decision to join being made before the matter had been fully debated.

Once a decision is made its "very inertia would assure continuation, even against better judgement, as the Lavi fighter project has shown," he said.

Israel's quick decision to enter the project "without a public airing" differed from the internal debate on the issue in the U.S., Dar held.

He could not escape the conclusion that "some officials are interested in getting Israel involved, as a chance to justify extensive travel back and forth to the U.S.," he said.

IDF officer 'acted correctly' in killing Balata man

By JOSHUA BRILLIANT

NABLUS. - The IDF officer who shot and killed a 57-year-old West Bank resident during a clash at the Balata refugee camp near Nablus on Monday acted correctly, the army said today.

The man, Mohammed Mahmud Abu-Dara, was shot dead when he attempted to strangle an IDF soldier after troops had arrested his son as they broke up a violent demonstration.

An IDF investigation said that the commander of the patrol shot and killed Abu-Dara as he tried to choke the soldier and that the patrol had "acted according to the instructions applying to the circumstances."

Also yesterday, Northern District police chief, Commander Levy Shaul, appointed Deputy Commander Shraga Levy, of Haifa, to investigate an incident in which police opened fire during disturbances at the funeral of murdered Nablus Mayor Zaefer al-Masri, on Monday.

The shooting began after a crowd had stoned a police vehicle.

The Nablus market and the area around the clock square were under curfew following the shooting yesterday of a 19-year-old resident during a clash with an IDF patrol.

The curfew was originally in force only in nearby Balata.

According to an IDF account, yesterday's incident started at about 11 a.m. when Arabs stoned soldiers near the clock tower.

The troops chased their attackers, who fled towards the market. The soldiers first ordered them to halt, and then fired warning shots at their attackers' legs.

Another Israeli source told The Jerusalem Post that the soldiers stopped the Arabs for a "routine check" when one of the men ran away.

The injured man was identified as Majed Taktuk, 19, of Nablus. He was hit in the knee and taken to the local Rafidiya Hospital.

Several people have been detained for questioning following Sunday's killing of Al-Masri.

The only evidence made public is that the 7.65mm. revolver used in the attack was also used in the killing, in January, of Border Policeman Jamil Fares, also in Nablus.

Defence officials see George Habash's Popular Front group as the most likely to have been behind Al-Masri's shooting.

But police ballistics test place Fatah, too, on the list of suspects. Defence sources noted that Fatah assumed responsibility for the assassination of Fares.

Meanwhile, in Gaza yesterday a smoke grenade was thrown at an IDF patrol. There were no injuries.

Al-Bireh-man cancels mayoral candidacy

Jerusalem Post Middle East Staff

Jamila a-Tarif, the deposed deputy mayor of Al-Bireh, yesterday withdrew his candidacy for the mayoralty of the West Bank town.

A-Tarif, a supporter of Yasser Arafat's Fatah organization, had headed a list of seven Al-Bireh residents who had applied to the Israeli authorities for appointment as the town's municipal council.

But in an announcement in yesterday's East Jerusalem newspapers, A-Tarif said he had changed his mind because of the recent attempt to "discredit the PLO's leadership" of the Palestinian people. A reference to King Hussein's recent declaration that Jordan was suspending political coordination with the PLO.

A-Tarif said that this, and the assassination of Zaefer al-Masri in Nablus and Israeli politicization of appointments to West Bank municipalities, threatened the unity of the Palestinians in the territories.

As a backer of Fatah, A-Tarif had little chance of being accepted by Israel as a mayoral candidate. But his withdrawal, only a day after two other local personalities had dropped their bids to administer West Bank towns, deals a further blow to Israeli devolution efforts.

Death's head letters for Orthodox Kahane opponents

By MYRA NOVECK

Threatening letters embellished with a skull and crossbones have been sent to Orthodox Jerusalemites who answered an advertisement from a group calling itself Orthodox Jews against Kahaneism.

Deborah Weissman said that after responding to the notice which appeared in The Jerusalem Post on February 21, she had received a call from an organizer, who explained that the group was to be a broad-based religious anti-Kahane front to include ultra-Orthodox Jews and supporters of right-wing parties.

A few days later she received a letter informing her that her name had been put in a "special" file and advising her to "keep a low profile."

It was signed "Director of Operations, Orthodox Jews for Kahaneism." It listed the same post office box as the original anti-Kahane advertisement.

Weissman said she had called the organizer, who had told her he had received several similar complaints. Apparently someone had gained access to his post office box, he said.

David Schonberg, who also received the threatening letter, filed a complaint with the police on Monday. He said the police had told him the group was unknown to them, but that they would investigate.

The police spokesman could provide no details last night, and said he did not know if the anti-Kach organizer had also filed a complaint.

Anger at AACI condemnation of Kahane

By MOSHE KOHN

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Kahanism is a "moral issue, not a political one," Rabbi Hank Skirball, national president of the Association of Americans and Canadians in Israel says, defending the AACI's recent condemnation of "Meir Kahane's racist programme and activities," against those who oppose the organization's taking a stand on what they consider a "partisan" issue.

Skirball told The Jerusalem Post yesterday the AACI's involvement in public affairs will be one of the issues discussed at its national convention on March 17-18. The condemnation of Kahaneism, issued by the AACI national board in December, has angered several members who are expected to voice their objections at the convention.

In the statement, Skirball says: "The Board's rationale was that Kahane's tactics have made him patently a kofer be'ikkar (heretic) with regard to a basic cornerstone of Zionism and Israel, and thus antithetical to AACI's fundamental philosophy. This puts the issue outside the realm of legitimate debate, and thus it is not a partisan issue."

"People who want to get involved in political issues have plenty of other forums in which to do it," one objector told The Post. "The AACI should concentrate on the matters for which it was created: helping newcomers to get settled and encouraging aliyah."

Skirball has written a statement defending the board's action that is to appear in the pre-convention issues of the AACI's regional bulletins.

In the statement, Skirball says: "The Board's rationale was that Kahane's tactics have made him patently a kofer be'ikkar (heretic) with regard to a basic cornerstone of Zionism and Israel, and thus antithetical to AACI's fundamental philosophy. This puts the issue outside the realm of legitimate debate, and thus it is not a partisan issue."

Egypt hints fundamentalists behind riots

Egyptian Interior Minister Zaki

Badr hinted for the first time yesterday that last week's riots had been incited by Moslem fundamentalists who had infiltrated the security forces in an attempt to overthrow President Mubarak's regime.

In a statement to the Al-Ahram newspaper, Badr said 17,000 conscripts had taken part in the disturbances in the Cairo area and four other Egyptian districts - 10,000 from the security police and 7,000 from the Central Security Forces.

Badr said that at a recent meeting with heads of security departments, Mubarak had asked the authorities to determine whether Moslem fundamentalists had infiltrated the security forces.

The investigators had not yet reached any concrete conclusions, he said.

Badr also told the paper that the authorities had seized the "memoirs" of jailed Lt. Col. Abboud al-Zumr, a leading member of the most extreme fundamentalist group in Egypt, Islamic Holy War. Al-Zumr is now serving a 25-year sentence for his part in the assassination of president Anwar Sadat and in disturbances which followed in Assiut, south of Cairo.

Lawyer to Cairo to aid drug-smuggler

By YORAM GAZIT

For The Jerusalem Post

TEL AVIV. - Attorney Zvi Lidski left for Cairo on Monday evening to represent Yosef Tahan, who is awaiting execution there after being sentenced for heroin smuggling.

Tahan, of Ashdod, was caught last August 18 with 1.35 kilos of heroin, which, according to the charges of which he was convicted, he was smuggling from Bombay to Israel. Since his sentencing, intense efforts to save him have been made by members of the Karaites community, to which Tahan belongs.

Demjanjuk spends a silent day in his cell

By BARBARA AMOYAL

Accused Nazi war criminal John Demjanjuk kept silent in his high-security cell at Ayalon Prison yesterday and stared at the ceiling for most of the day, his warders said.

Demjanjuk, accused of killing nearly a million people in the Treblinka concentration camp in Poland, was spending his fifth day in the jail after being extradited from the U.S. last Friday.

Except for telling Ramle Prison head Peretz Chen "In the jail where I was held in the U.S., they gave me a small television," Demjanjuk did not utter a single word.

He is being guarded by a specially-selected seven-man team led by Avraham Bar-Shebet. Bar-Shebet is charged with inspecting and tasting Demjanjuk's food before it is served to the prisoner in his cell.

Demjanjuk's warders, Jew, Christians and Druse all under the age of 25, are unarmed.

Jerris Nabas, a Christian warder said yesterday of his charge: "I treat Demjanjuk like any other prisoner."

Demjanjuk yesterday refused to dress and spent the day in his light blue prison-issue pyjamas. He wrote a two-page letter in his native Ukrainian to his wife in Cleveland and jotted down notes on pieces of paper.

He has neither asked for, nor received, newspapers or other reading matter. Prison Service officials said they would consider providing a television set if Demjanjuk submitted a formal request.

Demjanjuk was examined yesterday and declared "fit and strong," by Dr. Alexander Polanski of the Prison Service medical department.

The 66-year-old prisoner exercised yesterday afternoon.

TA man allegedly hacked to death by his brother

By YORAM GAZIT

and MICHAEL YUDELMAN

TEL AVIV. - A man was hacked to death with an axe at his Tel Aviv apartment yesterday in what police described as one of the city's most brutal murders.

Shamir Ben Yosef, 32, was allegedly murdered by his brother, Moshe, 22, who tried to commit suicide immediately afterwards.

"He deserved it. He was torturing our mother and the whole family. I couldn't take it any more," the younger brother reportedly told police.

The body was found by their mother when she returned from shopping to her home in quiet, residential Bar Ilan street.

Shamir was lying near his bed, his head smashed by three axe blows.

When police arrived, the victim's brother refused to come out of the bathroom, into which he had locked himself. The police broke the door and found him lying in the bath. He had swallowed 30 sleeping pills.

The two brothers often quarrelled, neighbours said. Both are said to have suffered bouts of mental instability.

Their 15-year-old brother was at school when the murder happened.

The trial resumes on June 2.

Galilee settlement members plan demonstration over funds

By MENAHEM BOROWITZ

KIRYAT SHMONA. - Members of the Galilee settlements of Shoheta, Neta, Even Menahem and Akosh said yesterday that they were planning a protest demonstration today on the Lebanese border.

Earlier, a meeting between moshav leaders and Jewish Agency officials failed to solve any of the farmers' financial problems.

The heads of the northern border settlements are demanding in urgent meeting with government ministers to discuss the economic crisis in the region.

Peres issues call for electoral reform

Post Political Reporters

Prime Minister Shimon Peres last night called for electoral reform, saying that there was no other way for improving the country's public administration.

Addressing the opening of the Civil Servants Union convention, Peres said that the coalition system had produced chronic abnormalities in Israel's governments. That system must be changed, he said, if the country was to have strong, efficient government.

Peres's call is expected to give impetus to the current Knesset initiative for electoral reform. Some 40 MKs have already signed a private members' bill proposing a mixed constituency and proportional representation system.

"In another five days," he said, "I will close down all the settlements in my region. We will get on the train to Jerusalem and then march with torches to the Treasury."

The Lebanese army seals off a crossing point on Beirut's Green Line yesterday, after two days of shelling and sniping between Christian and Moslem sectors of the city. (AFP telephoto)

Israel broke promise to U.S. on Ethiopian Jews, says Peled

MK Peled (Progressive Peace

List) said yesterday that the authorities were settling Ethiopian immigrants in the administered areas in increasing numbers, even though they had promised the U.S. government, at Washington's request, that these immigrants would be settled solely inside the Green Line.

In a statement in the Knesset lobby, Peled said that 51 of the 60 families in the Kiryat Arba immigrant absorption centre are from Ethiopia. Another 29 Ethiopian families were recently assigned permanent housing elsewhere in the territories, he said. Peled said the decision to send the Ethiopian Jews to Kiryat Arba followed heavy pressure by Gush Emunim.

Druse veterans

A Knesset body said yesterday that the Israel Lands Administration should stop discriminating against Druse ex-soldiers in determining the price they pay for building plots.

A joint committee of the Foreign Affairs and Defence Committee and the Finance Committee issued a statement yesterday noting that Druse veterans had to pay between 20 and 50 per cent more for plots of the same kind sold to IDF veterans who are residents of adjacent development towns.

The committee, which based its findings on the Israel Lands Administration's own statistics and records, said that the administration should give priority to the housing needs of Druse veterans, and Druse war-bereaved families.

Higher NII dues

Likud MK Ariel Weinstein warned yesterday that he would mount a filibuster against any measure the National Insurance Institute wanted approved by the Knesset, if the NII did not drop its plan to increase dues paid by some self-employed, while not raising the NII dues paid by wage-earners. The plan was to take effect commencing April 1, he said.

Weinstein said in a statement that the NII had already made detailed preparations to raise the ceiling for dues for the self-employed to four times the average wage in the economy. But the ceiling for wage-earners will remain at three times the average wage.

Price of anarchy

Labour and Social Affairs Minister Moshe Katsav said yesterday in the plenum that the rehabilitation of the economy was proving costly in unemployment, in the drop in the standard-of-living of the poor, in the failure to distribute the burden equally, and in a deterioration in the treatment of invalids and the mentally retarded.

Reviewing his ministry's activities, Katsav said that the full social impact of the economic plan was still not known. He mentioned, as an example the effect of rising unemployment on emigration.

Progress reported on Pollard plea-bargaining

Jerusalem Post Correspondent

WASHINGTON. - U.S. government prosecutors and lawyers representing accused Israeli spy Jonathan Jay Pollard were yesterday reported to be getting closer to some sort of plea-bargaining arrangement which would avoid the necessity of a full-scale trial.

A sign that progress in these highly sensitive discussions was taking place, authoritative sources said, was the government's surprise decision late last week to secretly release Pollard's wife, Mrs. Anne Henderson-Pollard, on $23,500 bail.

A closed federal hearing had determined that she could leave jail. The Washington Post yesterday quoted sources saying that he was cooperating with government investigators by providing information regarding his alleged espionage activities. He faces a possible life-in-prison sentence if convicted.

BLUMA KOPELIOWITCH

(widow of the late Dr. Yaacov (Yasha) Kopeliowitch) passed away at the age of 90, on Tuesday, March 4, 1986.
The funeral will take place at the Kfar Samir cemetery, Haifa, on Thursday, March 6, 1986.

Her Son: Michael (Miko) Kopeliowitch and his bereaved family
Her Friends

DOROTHY B. BARZELAY

She is mourned by her family and friends in the United States, Netanya and Jerusalem.
The funeral will take place today, Wednesday, March 5. Please phone after 9 a.m. AACI Netanya (053

Spokesman admits former UN chief served in Germany army Kurt Waldheim denies role in Nazi atrocities

VIENNA (AP). — A spokesman for Kurt Waldheim yesterday acknowledged that the former UN secretary-general had served in the German army during World War II, but rejected allegations that Waldheim had belonged to a Nazi organization or had had any connection with it.

Spokesman Gerold Christian said recent accounts linking Waldheim to Adolf Hitler's SA security troops and to war crimes in the Balkans had been timed to defame him during the current presidential campaign.

Waldheim, UN secretary-general between 1972 and 1982, is considered a front runner for the presidency and is supported by the People's Party, the centrist parliament-tary opposition.

The World Jewish Congress said yesterday in New York that Waldheim had served with a German unit that had transported Balkan Jews to extermination camps and had committed other atrocities.

Christian said Waldheim, as a first lieutenant, had been a translator in Army Group E, commanded by Gen. Alexander Loehr, who was executed by Yugoslavia for war crimes in 1947.

Waldheim himself has acknowledged having served in the unit, but both he and his spokesman have denied that he had any part in deportations or crimes against civilians.

Christian said Waldheim had joined the unit in Salonika, Greece, in 1942 after being wounded on the Russian front.

Biographical data pieced together from military archives and Waldheim's statements, published Monday in Profil news magazine, show that he served with the unit from March 24 to Nov. 19, 1942.

The magazine also published a copy of a recently declassified military registration card showing that Waldheim had belonged to an SA, or Sturmabteilung unit and a Nazi student group in Vienna in 1938.

"Waldheim was never a member of the SA, or an affiliated organization, or of the SS," said Christian. The SS, or Schutzstaffel, succeeded the brown-shirted SA as Hitler's elite guards.

He said that whoever had filled out the card had apparently assumed that Waldheim belonged to the SA because he occasionally rode horses belonging to the group.

"This whole campaign is aimed at embarrassing (Waldheim) and is obviously paid for," Christian said. He declined to say who he thought was behind the accusations.

"Somebody wants to link Waldheim to war atrocities, and not a word of it is true," Christian said.

The Socialist Party, which supports Waldheim's opponent Kurt Steyrer for the presidency, said on Monday it did not want to make an election issue of Waldheim's past.

Kurt Waldheim (Starphoto)

Controversy over plan for convent at Auschwitz

ROME (JTA). — A storm has broken out in the Roman Catholic Church over plans to establish a Carmelite convent on the site of the Auschwitz death camp in Poland, where more than 2 million Jews were murdered by the Nazis.

The establishment of the convent has been defended by Cardinal Franciszek Macharski in the wake of protests by Jewish groups in western Europe and the U.S.

Macharski, in a sermon published in the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano, said the camp had become a new "sacred place" belonging to "all humanity and to every people." However, some of his peers in the Roman Catholic hierarchy disagree.

A letter from the Catholic-European fund-raising group, sponsored by the pope and called "Aid to the Church in Distress" has promoted the Auschwitz convent as a "spiritual fortress and a guarantee of the conversion of strayed brothers from our countries as well as proof of our desire to erase outrages so often referred to the Vicar of Christ" (a clear reference to the beleaguered state of the Catholic Church in Communist Eastern Europe.)

Joseph Lichten, representative of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith in Rome, has asked "Was it necessary to speak of conversion here?" And a coalition of Jewish groups in Belgium called the plan "intolerable."

Cardinal Albert Decourtray, of Lyons, France, seemed to agree. He called the fund-raising plan "disconcerting" and observed that Auschwitz would always remain a reminder of the "attempts to exterminate Jews because they are Jews."

A spokesman for Cardinal Godfried Dannaels, of Malines-Brussels, said the bishops of Belgium and the Netherlands had not been consulted and were "not very happy" about the fund-raising campaign.

A Vatican source admitted that no Jewish groups had been consulted before the project was initiated in 1984 and added, "Perhaps this was a mistake."

Macharski noted that Carmelite nuns had founded a convent at the Dachau concentration camp in Germany 40 years ago and no one had objected. He said the Catholic victims at Auschwitz included a priest, Maximilian Kolbe, and Sister Edith Stein, a German Jewess who had converted to Catholicism and became a Carmelite nun.

Computers and schools — not yet integrated

By JOEL REBIBO
For The Jerusalem Post

Eighty-five per cent of the country's high schools have computers, as do 40 per cent of elementary schools. But experts who met yesterday at the Van Leer Jerusalem Institute, say that schools don't necessarily know what to do with them.

"There is no concept of what we want to do with computers and how we want to use them," Nira Hativa, a Tel Aviv University mathematician who has designed educational software, told the two-day symposium on computers in education.

Amram Melitz, an Education Ministry inspector, expressed concern that many classroom computers were not used because those who had developed the software had not understood classroom dynamics and had had no input from teachers.

To solve the problem, Prof. Gavriel Solomon, of Tel Aviv University's School of Education, proposed a national research center for computers in education. He also called an industry to work with education officials to formulate policy.

"It is naive to think that computers will solve all problems," he said. "But the educational system must teach children how to live with computers if we are to compete with the rest of the world."

Solomon said computers could contribute to individualized instruction and should not be harshly judged after only a few years. He favors concentrating ministry resources in a few select schools to develop a model of how computers should be used.

The ministry's policy, formulated three years ago, has favoured schools in development towns.

"It's consistent with our policy of trying to narrow the gap and improve the quality of education in these areas," Pedagogic Council head David Pur told The Jerusalem Post. "We also got extra funding from the Housing and Labour and Social Affairs Ministry for improving schools in these areas."

Money to purchase computers comes from the Mifal Hapayis national lottery — which last year allocated $2.4 million for additional computers — and from outside contributions. Six different types of computers are in school use.

The ministry pays for training teachers, but says it is "difficult to find qualified people to train the teachers."

"This is a small country with limited manpower," said Pur. "We have an acute problem trying to compete with industry to recruit computer people."

Pur says that another obstacle to computer education was that all manuals are printed in English.

Though the ministry originally planned to introduce computers in grade 7, it found that many pupils had already begun using computers even earlier. Today efforts are made to accustom kindergarten children to computers through games.

Software has been developed in arithmetic, Hebrew (reading) and English. Computers are used primarily for drill and practice and computer assisted learning, according to Pur.

"In the U.S. the computer was greeted with euphoria, and then there was a crash. We're trying to use a gradual approach. We've convened this seminar to consult the experts and decide whether to modify our approach."

The ministry has also announced a new robotics curriculum designed by three instructors in Beersheba.

The 'foreigner' who became inspector-general of the navy

By MOSHE KOHN
Jerusalem Post Reporter
"Hameffeked! Hameffeked!" (Chief) Chief!

The "meffeked" looked quizzically at the man addressing him.

The "meffeked," Alan Burke of London, retired senior officer of both the British and Israeli navies, was in Jerusalem last week as a member of the British delegation to the Fourth World Assembly of Jewish War Veterans. He looked at the Israeli participant's name tag, knitted his brows for a moment, then his face lit up. The two men fell into each other's arms.

Burke looks like a man in his 50s, even though he hints that 60 is quite far behind him. He strode through the corridors of the Laromne Hotel, with the gait of a young man taking a brisk constitutional on the deck of a ship.

During World War II, Burke served on four Royal Navy ships. He began as a sub-lieutenant on a destroyer in the Atlantic, then escorted Arctic convoys to Russia, and then did anti-submarine work as a lieutenant-commander skipping a corvette.

Demobilized in 1946, he came to Israel with Mahal (Volunteers from Abroad) two years later. "I had never belonged to a Zionist society," he said. "But when the war bubbled up in Israel, I couldn't stand on the sidelines. I wouldn't have been able to live with myself."

Alan Burke

"I was the only 'foreigner' (he drew inverted commas in the air around this word) to come here who had commanded a major war vessel abroad." So he was put in charge of planning the naval operations that involved blockading and bombarding Gaza, El-Arish and Rafah, and landing and then evacuating a group that would blow up the railway line from Egypt. He also commanded the force of three vessels that carried out these operations.

At the end of the War of Independence, Burke was sent to Marseilles to bring to this country the Royal Canadian Navy "River" class frigate Strathadam, which subsequently became the Israel Navy's first major warship.

While the ship was in Marseilles for overhaul, intelligence reports said Egyptian frogmen aboard an Egyptian merchantman berthed nearby might try to sabotage it. A heavy guard was put on the ship around the clock: volunteers recruited from a camp at St. Jérôme packed with refugees waiting to be taken to Israel.

Further reports said the Egyptians were going to attack on a certain night. Although the engine and boiler repairs had not been completed, Burke got clearance from the harbour authorities to go out on engine trials, took on just enough fuel to get to Haifa, ordered a harbour pilot to take the vessel out and another to take it in at 3 a.m., and informed the oil jetty that he wanted to complete fuelling the next day.

He left harbour in a thick fog. He dropped the pilot, navigated the approaches to the port, and headed for Haifa, where the ship slipped into port early one morning a few days later.

Burke's second-in-command of the ship when the Israel Navy took it over was Mordechai Limon, later OC Navy.

Burke went on to become chief of naval operations and then inspector-general of the Israel Navy. "Ben-Gurion was anxious to smarten up the navy a bit, to impose some authority and discipline," he recalled.

In 1954 he contracted amoebiasis, and had to retire from the Navy. He became marine superintendent of the Dizengoff shipping company, which sent him to New York to handle the merger with Zim. In New York he spent much of the following year in hospital taking tests and being treated for his ailment.

As executive director of the Anglo-Israel Chamber of Commerce, he has been in Israel "more times than I can count." And every time he is here, he says, "I can't walk down the streets without someone hailing me the way that chap just did. It's very embarrassing. I simply can't remember all the people who served with me. But it's really very wonderful."

Praise for Israel's community psychiatric care

By JUDY SIEGEL
Jerusalem Post Reporter

The 1985 law that permitted the forced hospitalization of the mentally disturbed only by approval of a Health Ministry district psychiatrist, was "the best of its kind at the time, still basically good today, but needing some changes," says Jerusalem District Psychiatrist Dr. Yair Bar-El.

In an interview with The Jerusalem Post yesterday, Bar-El said that in some countries people can be hospitalized in psychiatric institutions against their will by politicians, police officers, any psychiatrist, even the local fireman. That can clearly lead to the abuse of civil rights, says Bar-El. In Israel, psychiatric hospitalization must be authorized by one of the six district psychiatrists, who conduct, or authorize another psychiatrist to conduct, a psychiatric examination.

The main change that should be made in the law, he says, is that candidates for hospitalization would be required to undergo this test, which is now voluntary. The test can take anywhere from a half hour to several days. Since "anyone can play either disturbed or normal" for the examining psychiatrist, the conclusions drawn from the test can be subjective, and leaving the decision to the district psychiatrist was a wise move, Bar-El believes.

In Israel, only 7.8 per cent of the 6,000 psychiatric patients hospitalized each year are committed against their will, compared to 10 per cent in the U.S., 12 per cent in England, and 90 per cent in Japan.

In New York and California, civil liberties advocates have succeeded in releasing psychiatric patients who are not dangerous to others. But thousands of them are now said to be wandering aimlessly in the streets. Unlike Israel, which has extensive community facilities for the care of disturbed persons, these states have neglected to find a place for formerly hospitalized disturbed patients.

Bar-El, originally from Argentina, has been in his post for the last decade. He is also director of the Jerusalem Mental Health Centre named for Dr. Arye Yaros at Kfar Shaul. The centre has a drug abuse clinic, a day care centre, an outpatient clinic and a hospital for 270 patients, many of them Holocaust survivors.

"You'll hardly find young people living in psychiatric hospitals today," he says, since efforts are made to treat them in the community with drugs and other therapy. This saves the state money, and, more importantly, reduces the patients' passivity and increases their ability to live outside on their own.

Bar-El maintains that few psychiatric patients are dangerous to others. Few have been caught committing violent acts, because serious psychiatric illness "destroys their volition." But there are complaints about those who look strange or are annoying.

Kfar Shaul has placed 23 former patients, most of them survivors of Holocaust traumas, who had been hospitalized there for over 20 years, in sheltered homes and their own flats in various parts of the city. They work mostly in free-market jobs or in sheltered workshops. Most are reluctant to leave Kfar Shaul, so the hospital has set up apartments on the premises where they are gradually trained to cope with normal life — to maintain personal hygiene, take care of a flat, observe proper table manners and the like.

As a result of the community-oriented approach, four private psychiatric hospitals in Jerusalem have been closed in recent years, in contrast to Japan, which is increasing the number of its psychiatric hospital beds.

The rights of patients, ethical problems in diagnosis, malpractice, child abuse and sexual problems and the law were discussed at the recent second International Congress on Psychiatry, Law and Ethics, which Bar-El helped organize in Tel Aviv.

About 120 foreigners, including lawyers, judges, psychiatrists and psychologists attended, together with 300 Israeli counterparts. Bar-El says that Israel is seen as very advanced in the study and discussion of such subjects. Another conference is being planned for three years hence. Bar-El heads a government committee that examines complaints of alleged psychiatric disturbance made against licensed health professionals, such as doctors, nurses, dentists and physiotherapists. In the past four years, 75 complaints against doctors alone have been brought before the board: 40 per cent had their licences revoked; 30 per cent were allowed to continue working even if they were "somewhat disturbed"; and the rest were told to stop working with patients, and were assigned to research, x-ray units or administration.

Bar-El, as the Knesset's adviser on psychiatry (he checks all candidates for the Knesset guard), has received complaints from the public about the "mental illness" of ministers or MKs, but he will not hospitalize a politician on "the basis of how he appears on TV or what he says."

"A large number of psychiatrists and psychologists" have sought his permission to talk to the 14-year-old Jerusalem boy who 10 days ago murdered his parents and two sisters. The case is unprecedented in Israel, and the professionals "wanted to understand." But Bar-El has tried to keep outsiders from interfering.

The boy is being examined at the Talbieh Psychiatric Hospital. The case has distressed parents and children alike, and that will continue until a reason for the multiple tragedy is found, he says. Publicizing such incidents, and suicides, does create a public sense that they are "normal" or "permissible," but Bar-El won't say that the press must stop reporting them.

Bar-El and his colleagues are considering taking the boy back to his home, the scene of the crime, to test his reactions, or treating him with drugs or hypnosis for analysis, but this has not yet been approved.

British daily 'Today' hits the streets

LONDON (AP). — Britain's first electronically produced national daily newspaper rolled off the presses Monday night, a full-colour morning tabloid that rival publishers see as their most formidable low-cost challenge this century.

The editions of early yesterday are the first of the 1.2 million print run of the paper called Today, owned by publishing entrepreneur Eddy Shah. Shah, 42, who three years ago was a provincial publisher of free community newspapers, yesterday flew on visits to his three high-technology printing plants in the London, Manchester and Birmingham areas.

Today, with editorial headquarters in southwest London's Pimlico district, is patterned after the American nation-wide paper USA Today. Shah hopes to siphon off 1m. daily newspaper sales out of Fleet Street's combined 15.2m. circulation. He claims he can break even with sales as low as 300,000.

Today's production costs, some 70 per cent below those of most of Fleet Street, have prompted rival publishers to consider fleeing London's newspaper row, where production unions are fighting to preserve outdated printing methods.

"Fleet Street has been in a mess since before I was born," Shah said on Monday. "I think it's wrong to look at me and say I am the cause of all this happening," he added.

Today, which cost $43m. to launch, has 600 staff members, including 125 journalists, compared with payrolls of from 2,000 to 6,500 on most Fleet Street publications. Shah has bypassed the two major production unions and hired electricians on a no-strike deal to run the new presses.

Shah shot to prominence in 1983 when he defied mass picketing and hired non-union labour at the plant in Warrington, north England where his free papers were published.

Six weeks before Today's launch, publisher Rupert Murdoch fired 5,500 production workers in a dispute over technology and switched production of his four British newspapers to a computerized plant in east London's Wapping.

HOME NEWS IN BRIEF

Limits on municipal rates

A committee to study municipal rates for commercial enterprises in the large cities was set up yesterday by the coalition executive in response to recent increases of up to 320 per cent, which have enraged many of the country's merchants.

The committee will be headed by Minister-without-Portfolio Yosef Shapira and will include Meir Shitrit, Haim Ramon and Dov Ben-Meir.

Sharir may deliver Peres note to Mubarak

Tourism Minister Avraham Sharir may deliver a special message from Prime Minister Peres to Egyptian President Mubarak when he visits Egypt on March 16.

A meeting between Sharir and Peres has been scheduled for early next week. Sharir will spend five days in Egypt at the invitation of his Egyptian counterpart Fuad Sultan.

Third man flees prison

A 28-year-old Taibe resident, detained for 72 hours for refusing to pay alimony and child support, escaped yesterday morning from the Ma'asiyahu Prison in Ramle. Omar Masrawa is the third prisoner to escape from the minimum-security prison in less than a month.

Grenade tossed into prison warden's car

HAIFA. — Damon Prison warden Rafael Shukrun's car was extensively damaged by a hand grenade thrown early yesterday morning, police reported.

The fragmentation grenade was thrown into the empty vehicle while it was parked outside Shukrun's Kiryat Sprinzak home.

West Bank land fraud

Material gathered in nearly six months of police investigation into the West Bank land fraud case was delivered yesterday to the Tel Aviv District Attorney's office for the preparation of charges against six principal suspects.

Yitzhak Yarnai, manager of five companies which allegedly bought land illegally between 1980-1985, and lawyers Sami Mu'alem and Uri Ben-Yehuda were released on bail last September after nearly three weeks in jail. Avraham Salim and Yehoshua Mizrahi, of Bat Yam, and Michael Oren, of Rehovot, were held for 45 days before their release on bail.

Police sources yesterday said additional arrests can be expected. "We have another 200 cases to investigate in the matter."

Prof. Osamu Hayaishi, president of the Osaka Medical College in Japan, is to receive the $100,000 Wolf Prize for Medicine. The prize acknowledges Hayaishi's discovery of oxygenases, a group of enzymes that are catalysts in living organisms' use of oxygen. They also play a role in the metabolic disposal of foreign compounds, such as drugs and insecticides.

CORRECTION:

The delegate to the International Conference on Urban Revitalization pictured shaking President Herzog's hand in yesterday's Jerusalem Post was Thamsanqa Mapanza of Swaziland, wearing traditional Swazi dress, and not as originally published.

Hangings make me queasy but sometimes they are necessary

IN PERSON

By BENNY MORRIS

Meir Cohen-Avidov intends to break his Likud party's discipline and vote for the Tehiya bill imposing Israeli law on the West Bank if it comes to the vote today. He could not do otherwise, he says. "For me it is a matter of conscience," he said yesterday.

Cohen-Avidov, a former deputy speaker of the Knesset, says that he is "sorry Israel didn't do this in 1967, when the world was in shock, and it would have been regarded as 'natural'."

As to the other bill on the agenda, the anti-racism legislation, Cohen-Avidov says it is "superfluous." There are sufficient laws to cover such offences, he says. He concedes that no one has yet been prosecuted in Israel for racism but says: "What racism?" "Arabs are often turned down as prospective tenants in rentals," I offer as an example. "That's not racism," he says. "Why, I wouldn't rent a flat to a (female) bar-tender. Is that racism?"

"Isn't Kach leader Meir Kahane a racist?"

"I don't know," says Cohen-Avidov, adding that Progressive List for Peace MK Mohammed Miari "is more of a racist."

"Why?" "Because he supports the Palestinian National Council," says Cohen-Avidov. He seems to equate anti-Zionism with racism.

Cohen-Avidov has submitted three private member's bills to the Knesset. The first would compel every would-be voter in the Knesset elections to sign an affidavit in the Interior Ministry declaring "his loyalty to the State of Israel, to its flag and to its symbols." Cohen-Avidov wants "loyal citizens."

Meir Cohen-Avidov (Haroni)

His second bill would provide free education from kindergarten through university to all except the first two children born to their families.

Cohen-Avidov's third bill would oblige anyone not serving in the IDF to give the state half of the national minimum wage per month to finance free pre-academic and university education for army veterans. He realizes that this would principally affect Arabs.

A fourth Cohen-Avidov bill, supporting the introduction of the death penalty, has been circulating in the Knesset for many months. When it was brought up last year, he says, "it got only my vote." But he intends to re-present it regularly. Arabs interpret the absence of a death penalty for brutal terrorists as a sign of weakness, he says.

"They don't understand it if you don't behave as they would." He says the existence of the death penalty would deter terrorists, and Israel could invoke it during terrorist attacks. "Let's take the Achille Lamro hijacking. We could have said: 'We will now execute your comrades if you kill any of our hostages.' It would perhaps have saved lives."

"I am not bloodthirsty," he says. "In fact, (the idea of hangings) makes me queasy. But sometimes it is necessary," says Cohen-Avidov, who was an Etzel (Irgun Zva'i Le'umi) member during the British Mandate period. "The big difference between us and the Arabs," he said at one point, "is that I am against executions in public squares."

He tells me of an Arab poetess who recently wrote that she would like to eat an Israeli soldier's liver raw.

YOUR CONTRIBUTIONS ARE WORKING. THANKS.

Supporters of The Jerusalem Post's Forgive Me Not Fund have been responding generously all winter long. Your donations have gone a long way to caring for the country's elderly...

... providing warmth during the cold winter months, and providing the funds for day care centres to continue operating

... providing comfort and security in their own homes, with basic repairs and locks or beepers

... providing urgently needed dental care

... and if there's a little left over, we can even provide something "extra" — like a once-in-a-lifetime vacation, or rest and recuperation for someone who has been ill.

PLEASE, GIVE GENEROUSLY.

Accepting Offices:
Jerusalem: The Jerusalem Post Building, Ben-Zion Industrial Zone
Tel Aviv: 11 Carmel St.
Haifa: 16 Nardani St. (Hadar HaEzer)
Or send by mail to: The Jerusalem Post, P.O. Box 91000, Jerusalem 91000.

FOST All funds are allocated according to the recommendations of the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs.

The Jerusalem phone book, in English.

Now on sale at the following sales points of The Jerusalem Post:

Distribution by Atlas, Tel Aviv, 49
Tehelkenov, Tel. 03-378901; Jerusalem, 4
Shushan, Tel. 02-247748

Tel. Pole, Neve Ya'akov • Hamaikot, Ramat Eshkol •
Bambino, Ramat Eshkol • St. George's Campus • French Hill
Commercial Centre • Central Bus Station Building •
Ha'ad, Jaffa Rd. • Saraf, Beit Hakerem •
Siti, Kiryat Hayovel Centre • Foto Doron, Beit Vegen •
Lawson, Ben Yehuda St. • Nissan Levy, Pithulim •
Migash Hapalanch, Hagalim St. • Bocky, Herzog St. •
Sulene, Azza St. • San Simon Post Office • Mazon, Bak •
Heliol Labaty, Ramot B • Be-Li, Gilo Commercial Centre •
All Steimatzky Bookstores

Published by Golden Pages for Vezeg.
PRICE: NIS 8.— (incl. VAT)

Or available direct from The Jerusalem Post, using this coupon:

To: BOOKS, The Jerusalem Post, P.O. Box 91000, Jerusalem 91000

Please send me the ISRAELI ENGLISH TELEPHONE DIRECTORY —

JERUSALEM 02

I enclose a cheque for NIS 8.—

NAME _____

ADDRESS _____

Panel formed to recover Marcos's 'ill-gotten wealth'

Mass resignation of Philippine judges

MANILA (AP). — Justices of the Philippines' second highest court resigned en masse yesterday and a news report said at least five of the Supreme Court's 12 members also quit.

The official Philippines News Agency reported the Supreme Court resignations, but Rene Saguisag, a spokesman for President Corason Aquino, said, "We have not received any of their resignations."

The justices, all holdovers from the government of former president Ferdinand Marcos, have been resisting demands from the new president to step down. The court has 15 seats but three were vacant.

One of those the PNA said had resigned was Justice Claudio Teehanee, who administered the oath of office to Aquino a week ago and has been mentioned as her possible choice for chief justice.

Two others, Justices Vicente Adad Santos and Lino Patajo, were quoted as saying they were placing their posts "at the disposal of the president."

Justice Minister Neptali Gonzales said the presiding judge of the Court of Appeals, Ramon Gaviola, met with Aquino to assure her all of its 338 justices were resigning, Gonzales said.

Also yesterday, the chairman of a five-man commission charged by Aquino with recovering "all ill-gotten wealth" accumulated by Marcos, his family and associates, said that between $5 billion and $10 billion worth of assets may be missing.

Jovito Salonga told a news conference that documents found after Marcos abandoned Malacanang Palace "link the cronies and business associates with the acquisition of property for and in the name of Mr. Marcos" in New York.

He said he did not know how many documents were destroyed by Marcos and his entourage fled, but enough were recovered "to prove our case in the courts of New York."

Lawyers representing the Philippine government obtained a court order two days ago temporarily barring the sale or transfer of five New York properties allegedly owned or controlled by Marcos.

Meanwhile, groups of Filipinos picketed three city halls to protest the new government's removal of mayors and other local officials loyal to Marcos.

The largest of the demonstrations on Monday involved about 2,000 people at the city hall in Quezon City, a Manila suburb. Some 700 carried signs outside the city hall in Baguio City, in northern Luzon, and another 200 staged a protest at General Santos City, on the southern island of Mindanao.

The protests have stemmed from a decision by Aquilino Pimentel, Aquino's new minister for local governments, to cancel a scheduled March election and replace the Marcos loyalists with Aquino supporters.

Members of Marcos's party, the New Society Movement, or KBL, drafted a resolution on Monday asking Aquino to retain the local officials until their terms of office expire in June.

Swedish police criticized $70,000 reward announced for Olof Palme's assassin

STOCKHOLM. — Swedish police yesterday offered a 500,000-kronor ($70,000) reward for information leading to the arrest of the assassin of Prime Minister Olof Palme.

Stockholm Police Commissioner Hans Holmer announced the reward offer in a news conference broadcast nationwide by Swedish radio. He also said the killer apparently escaped in a car.

The news conference, the first in the investigation in two days, came amid a wave of criticism in Stockholm newspapers about police handling of the hunt for Palme's killer.

One Swedish national police official said Stockholm investigators had failed to contact the country's top forensic laboratory in their effort to find the killer.

"Swedish radio reported that 'chaos broke out' at police headquarters when the first reports of Palme's killing came in late Friday. Police detective Goesta Soederstrom told the station that valuable time was needlessly lost because headquarters personnel did not immediately issue an alarm to patrolling units."

The mounting criticism came on the fourth day of the investigation into Palme's killing.

Soederstrom, who was patrolling near the site of Palme's death, said police headquarters did not alert its patrol cars of the reported shooting until six minutes after receiving the first tip-off. He said the delay could have given the gunman a chance to escape.

Two national newspapers criticized the police for being slow to react, saying they had failed to cord off the murder scene properly or cut off possible escape routes. They said it took one hour and 20 minutes for extra police to move into Stockholm's main railway station, by which time two trains had left. The centre of Stockholm was not sealed off and virtually no checks were made on cars or pedestrians.

In addition, the newspapers said, the two bullets fired by the gunman were found by passers-by long after the police said they had combed the area.

The liberal daily Dagens Nyheter said in an editorial that everything pointed to Palme having been shot on Stockholm's main street "for pure terrorist aims." (AP, Reuters)

Gulf states meeting today to discuss Iranian threat

KUWAIT. — The armed forces chiefs of staff of the six-member Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) are to meet today in the Saudi capital to discuss how to deal with "repeated Iranian threats" against the Gulf monarchies, a Kuwaiti official said yesterday.

A communique published in Riyadh at the end of a GCC meeting said that the armed forces chiefs would meet in order to "take the necessary measures to cope with any possible danger" but did not specify a date.

The Iranian offensive on the southern front has brought the Iraqis within 20 kms from Kuwaiti territory, as they dug in on Iraq's Faw peninsula.

The GCC members are Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Bahrain, Qatar, the United Arab Emirates and Oman. The Gulf states said Iran's military presence in southern Iraq threatened their security and called on Tehran to withdraw its forces.

Meanwhile, Iran charged that Iraqi warplanes had bombed residential areas in southwest Iran yesterday morning, killing 12 people.

Tehran Radio said that the casualties were at the village of Shadegan, in Khuzistan province, which was hit in two bombing raids. The Iranian news agency Irna said the village of Mandavand, in the same sector, had also been hit.

Iraq denied the Tehran charge that its warplanes bombed civilian areas yesterday. An Iraqi military spokesman said Iraqi jets had attacked a military camp at Shadegan.

Baghdad press reports meanwhile said Iraqi Kurds were joining government forces battling Iranian troops who launched an offensive into Iraqi Kurdistan eight days ago.

There was no fresh word on the battle for the Faw peninsula. Iraqi commanders say their counter-attack has been hampered by bad weather. (AP, Reuters)

Radio Liberty editor missing for week

MUNICH (Reuters). — Police seeking a Russian emigre missing for a week from his senior editorial post at the U.S. station Radio Liberty said yesterday they were checking a tip that he may have gone to Stockholm or Vienna.

Oleg Tumanov, 42-year-old acting chief editor of the Munich station's round-the-clock broadcasts to the Soviet Union, has not been seen since he left work early on February 24 complaining of illness.

"The last anyone talked to him was last Tuesday, when he called in and said he was sick," station spokesman Bill Mahoney said.

Police said they were alerted last Thursday after friends calling at Tumanov's flat became suspicious.

"A valuable icon and stamp collection are missing from the flat," a police spokesman said.

He said a close woman friend of Tumanov called the disappearance suspicious and told police he may have gone to Stockholm or Austria to turn the valuables into cash.

Mahoney would not comment on speculation that Tumanov had decided to return to his homeland. He pointed out that the editor was sentenced to death in absentia for defecting from the Soviet Navy.

FOREIGN NEWS IN BRIEF

Australia hopes to sell minesweeper in Mideast

SYDNEY (AFP). — The Royal Australian Navy yesterday unveiled a revolutionary mine-hunting system which it hopes to sell to Southeast Asian and Middle East nations.

Codenamed the Catamaran Project, the system comprises electronic equipment which straps on to a specially designed twin-hulled vessel. The first minesweeper to carry the equipment, the Rushcutter, is to be launched in June.

The navy hopes to market the Catamaran Project for around $20 million — a package which would include both ship and system.

U.S.-Soviet arms talks recess for two months

GENEVA (AP). — The U.S.-Soviet arms talks entered a two-month recess yesterday with the chief Soviet negotiator calling the U.S. uncooperative and the head U.S. delegate saying progress at the fourth round of talks was "slow."

The head of the U.S. delegation, Max Kampelman, was mildly hopeful when asked whether he thought an arms-control agreement could be concluded by summer, when President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev may hold a second summit meeting.

Top U.S. Navy surgeon jailed for manslaughter

WASHINGTON (AFP). — Commander Donald Billig, former head of cardiac surgery at Bethesda Naval Hospital, was sentenced here on Monday to four years in prison and discharged from the navy for having caused the deaths of three patients.

Dr. Billig, who continued doing open-heart surgery despite having partly lost the use of one eye, was found guilty late last week of manslaughter and two involuntary homicides.

French hotelier asks court to oust Duvalier

ANNIECY, France (AP). — The owner of the luxury hotel where former Haitian president Jean-Claude Duvalier and his family have been living for the past month went to court yesterday seeking an order that the Duvaliers and their police guard leave the hotel.

Jean Tiffenot of the Hotel de l'Abbaye at nearby Talloires was told that a ruling would be handed down tomorrow.

Afghan guerrillas shoot down 3 Soviet 'copters

ISLAMABAD (Reuters). — Afghan rebels shot down three Soviet helicopters on successive days last month around the capital city of Kabul, western diplomats said yesterday.

One was shot down on February 20 south of the city and the second was hit the next day near the rebel-held Lalander gorge southwest of Kabul, they said.

elscint

The telephone numbers of the company's sections at the science based industries center, Elscint, changed at 7:30 a.m. on March 4. From this time, the various extensions can be obtained by direct dialling. To do this, dial 540, followed by the extension number.

The new number of our switchboard is 04-540540

A police helicopter flies in to rescue people who fled to the rooftop of the blazing high-rise building in Caracas. (AFP telephoto)

Chile ambassador, 14 others die in Venezuelan blaze

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP). — Chilean Ambassador Carlos de Costa Nora was killed in a fire on Monday night that destroyed the Chilean Embassy. A radio station reported 14 other people also died in the blaze.

The fire consumed the top two floors of a 14-storey building where the embassy was located. At least two other victims were employees of the Chilean embassy.

Witnesses on the scene said they had seen three people leap from the upper floors of the building.

The radio station, Radio Rumbos, reported that 15 people were killed in the fire.

"It is sad to say it, but I understand among the dead is the ambassador, the station quoted Fire Chief Emilio Garcia as saying at the scene of the blaze.

Television news reports said the cause of the blaze was electrical, but this was not confirmed by police.

Hundreds of passers-by watched as rescue workers plucked people off the rooftop with ropes strung from police helicopters. They were dropped off at the nearby Francisco de Miranda airport.

Office workers who were rescued from the building said that the fire erupted after a brief power stoppage, followed by smoke and flames inside the building.

Angola rebels seize 150 foreigners

LISBON (AP). — Angolan rebels who captured more than 150 foreign workers in an attack on a northern diamond-mining town said yesterday they will free all the hostages once they have reached rebel strongholds in the south.

Alcides Sakala, Lisbon spokesman for the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, or Unita, announced that most of the foreigners captured on March 1 at Andrada in Lunda-Norte province were Portuguese and Filipinos but also included Britons, West Germans and Romanians.

"The Portuguese and the Filipinos will be released without further technicalities once they reach Jamba," Unita's bush headquarters nearly 2,000 kms. to the south, Sakala said.

But the trip, usually by foot, "could take two or three months," he said, adding that all of those taken in the action would be released "through the offices of the International Red Cross."

He denied that Unita had set conditions for the release of the British, Germans and Romanians.

Unita claimed the attack on Andrada in telephone calls to Portuguese news agencies early yesterday. A subsequent note distributed to reporters said 60 loyal troops to the government of President Jose Eduardo dos Santos had been killed in the attack.

"We also got kilos and kilos of freshly cut diamonds that were awaiting shipment to Luanda," the Angolan capital, Sakala said.

SPORTS

Basketball semi-finals: Clash of contrasting styles

By DON GOULD
Post Basketball Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Sparking off one of the most interesting play-off series in years, Elitzur Netanya, a team that loves to run and gun their way past their opponents, travel tonight to Hapoel Holon, a combination who are also able to run but who generally perform better behind their big front line when they slow the tempo down and settle into a set offence.

In consequence, each of the two new contenders for National League honours will be trying to impose their preferred style on the other and a most enticing struggle, which should go the full three games, is in the offing.

Tonight's opener in Holon is at 8 p.m. The local Hapoel ought just to be able to make home court advantage and the fact that they command a stronger bench tell in their favour.

The other semi-finals, Maccabi Tel Aviv and Hapoel Tel Aviv, begin their contest at Yehuda tomorrow evening.

Maccabi's veteran point-guard Mottel Aroonist announced his retirement from the national team. He had made up his mind even before Israel's recent clinching victory over Czechoslovakia which saw them through to the World Cup finals in Spain this summer. On his planned absence from that tournament the affable Aroonist said "there are several highly competitive young players who can more than ably step into my shoes."

His decision is unrelated to his future with the champion club.

The fund-passed on a two-thirds vote. Rabbi

salem Post to win this issue of it.

to press fo institutions

The 198

Last year

$60 million

immigrati

Moses. Th

an increas principally rants, and are the ec

ral settl

another $2

as well.

These ali

by grants f

According

chairman o

Governors

Board of G

such an op people the able to par

discussio

ership in

Asked if h was not a p increase, t among U.S.

berger repl

PR, but t

were doing of our 'sh

them a bett

tributions

are a

Lawyers

Prisoner

MONTREAL

national c

"work relat

all the Sh

now rotting

USSR and established here by M

essor Irvin various Sov

African bla

Nelson Mand

Buy-line

TEL AVIV AREA ★ GUIDE TO SHOPPING RESTAURANTS AND SERVICES

To appear in this column, phone Marvin, 03-294222, 474765.

Within the walls of the "Zion" building are located two Yemenite/Middle-Eastern restaurants.

Zion: For 30 years, this popular Yemenite restaurant has been serving fresh, kosher food at reasonable prices. Zion's delicately flavoured dishes, most notable stuffed artichokes, pears, roast lamb, sweet radish and its famous soups — yours to taste in a meal that cannot be duplicated anywhere.

ZION EXCLUSIVE: For a Special Treat — For a Special People — For a Special Occasion.

Walk into another world, where your every dining whim will be satisfied. A complete line of kosher Yemenite food, served in an exotic atmosphere.

Tel. 03-657323, 658714, 28 Pedu'im St., Tel Aviv.

FOR MEN

Leather Goods, Luggage and the Special Gift for YOUR MAN

65 Yehuda Hamaccabi St., Tel Aviv. Tel. 03-444984.

al bar

rehabilitation products Ltd.

HELPS THE DISABLED TO MASTER LIFE!!!

We may have the device that will improve your quality of life! And if we don't, we will advise you where it can be obtained! The best expert counselling is at your service, with no obligation on your part! Please phone or visit us any Monday, Wednesday or Thursday, 9 a.m.-3 p.m., 6 Kfar Yona Street, Ramat Aviv, Tel Aviv. Tel. 03-419050.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 497302.

12 Kehilat Venezia St. (Magor Building), Next Atlas Tel. 03-494203, 490644, 49

Tireless leader Down Under

In Moscow, New Delhi and Beijing Isi Leibler (right) has been working to help fellow Jews. Greer Fay Cashman reports

FOR ALL of his adult life, Isi Leibler, 51, has been in the driver's seat of Australian Jewish communal affairs.

He is the chairman of the Asia-Pacific Jewish Association, which he helped to found a little over six years ago, and chairman of the Australian Institute of Jewish Affairs, of which he was one of the initiators in 1983. At the end of last year, he completed a second term as president of the Executive Council of Australian Jewry, the highest office in organized Australian Jewish life. He is also a member of the executive of the World Jewish Congress.

Not surprisingly, most of the organizations that Leibler has headed have flourished. Independently wealthy, with a wide circle of friends and acquaintances, Leibler unstintingly pours his own funds into projects close to his heart and, with only the slightest pressure, has persuaded others to contribute in a like manner.

Although he has excellent contacts in the Australian political arena — Prime Minister Robert Hawke is a personal friend — Leibler has resisted all invitations to move out of Jewish politics into general politics. An observant Jew to whom concern for the destiny of his own people is paramount, Leibler works tirelessly to preserve Jewish life, lives and values.

An activist in 1959 in the international protest movement on behalf of Soviet Jewry, Leibler three years later was the moving force behind a campaign that led the Australian government to raise the plight of Soviet Jewry before the United Nations. It was the first country to do so.

Leibler has been to Moscow three times and was instrumental in arranging Hawke's visit to Moscow in 1979, during which time the latter met with many Jewish refuseniks. A founding member of the International Soviet Jewry Presidium, he was last September one of the six members of the presidium's delegation to the White House to discuss Soviet Jewry with President Ronald Reagan.

He has access to presidents, prime ministers and other high-ranking officials in many countries around the globe.

Travel presents no problem as Leibler is chairman and managing director of Jetset Tours, Australia's largest travel organization, with more than 1,000 employees and branches in the U.S., United Kingdom, New Zealand and Southeast Asian countries. Jetset became an even more powerful corporation last November when it merged with Air New Zealand on a 50/50 basis.

ESTABLISHING dialogue and creating understanding with and among opinion-makers and intellectuals throughout Southeast Asia and the Pacific is now one of Leibler's chief passions. This is part of the raison d'être of the APJA.

In a sense, APJA owes its existence to the Soviet authorities who, since 1980, have denied Leibler an entry visa to the USSR. Frustrated by his inability to do field work among aliyah activists in Russia, he turned his attention closer to home.

Leibler grasped the potential field of activity that Australian Jewry had in Southeast Asia.

"It is precisely because Jews and Judaism do not figure in Asian civilizations as they do in the West," says Leibler, "that we have an opportunity to establish a dialogue that is not caught up in the preoccupations and hangovers of the past that play such a role in the West."

Looking at the other side of the coin, he warns that in some ways the absence of a Jewish presence in Asia can also be a formidable problem.

Asians have an exaggerated perception of Jewish power. When he was in New Delhi 3½ years ago, he met the late prime minister Indira Gandhi, who expressed bitterness towards world Jewry. Her stated reason was that American Jewry, which she was certain controlled the American press, was responsible for her problems with the U.S. administration and was forcing her towards the Russian corner. She was quite convinced that world Jewry was punishing her for her attitude to Israel.

Afterwards, Leibler was introduced to the deputy minister of finance. The latter ushered Leibler into a small room, locked the door and told him that India was badly in need of plutonium and would like to get a few billion dollars worth of Eurodollars charged at a more attractive rate than that of the International Bank.

"If you can arrange that," he told Leibler, "we can overcome most of the problems between us and Israel."

An amazed Leibler protested that he was merely an official of the World Jewish Congress and suggested that the deputy minister had come to the wrong source.

In all his meetings with Asian leaders Leibler has discerned the same constant thread in conceptions about the Jews. "Everyone sees the Jews as a major power with vast areas of control," Leibler has ceased to argue the point. "I'm beginning to think it's an important weapon in political terms."

LEIBLER is gravely concerned about the future of Indian Jewry, which is the most important and the largest Jewish community in Southeast Asia. He says that the six thousand Jews still there, most of them in Bombay, are "desperate" for Jewish education and have been neglected by the rest of the Jewish world.

What especially riles Leibler is that whereas Australia can have as many as 20 resident emissaries representing the various Israeli political streams, Israel has not sent a single emissary to India.

He believes that the international focus is shifting from West to East. Noting Japan's rapid economic growth, Leibler forecasts that by the end of the century, Asian nations will be seeking political roles commensurate with their economic and population strength. "This is bound to affect the nature of the Third World, the United Nations and other international forums," he says. "By extension, it is bound to affect Israel and world Jewry."

Leibler believes in being prepared. This preparedness must include the laying of foundations for the future in countries in which there are no longer or possibly never have been Jewish communities. He has been twice to the Chinese People's Republic, first as a travel executive, then — at the end of last year — as representative of the World Jewish Congress. This time he held talks in Beijing with officials of the Bureau of Religious Affairs and the Chinese People's Association for Friendship. That was the first time that representatives of Chinese government agencies officially received a representative of an international Jewish organization.

Leibler says there is still a sensitivity about Arabs in China, which has lessened now because of the strengthened independence of China and the opening of other areas as sources of energy. Trade and technology, he foresees, will soften the Chinese regarding the Jews in general and Israel in particular.

"Trade and technology are areas where no ideologies intrude," he pronounces.

Fight over Reform hostel

By WALTER RUBY
Post New York Correspondent

NEW YORK. — The debate here over the Jewish Agency's $400 million budget for fiscal year 1986-87 was punctuated by a fight over an allocation of $250,000 for the completion of a Reform movement youth hostel in Jerusalem. The Agency Board of Governors approved the budget last Wednesday.

Rabbi Louis Bernstein, an American Mizrahi leader and president of the Rabbinical Council of America, charged that the money for the hostel, which is in addition to the $500,000 already allocated by the Agency to the Reform movement over the last several years, represents "something on which we should not be spending communal funds." He added, "I resent that those who give the money (in the U.S.) should call the shots on who receives it and direct money to the Reform movement in this way. I think this opens the door to a great number of requests for funding from a wide number of religious and non-religious organizations."

Bernice Tanenbaum, chairman of the American Section of the World Zionist Organization, echoed Bernstein's concerns. "I fear that this is going to open a Pandora's box," she said. "A wide variety of organizations will come to see the Jewish Agency as a milking cow."

According to Jewish Agency Executive chairman Arye Dulin, "The funding for the Reform youth hostel is merited. This will bring many young people to Israel. We have given grants to many other institutions — including Orthodox ones."

The funding of the Reform hostel passed on a voice vote, with about two thirds voting in favour. After the vote, Rabbi Bernstein told The Jerusalem Post, "We never had a chance to win this vote, but by making an issue of it, it will make it easier for us to press for funding (of Orthodox institutions) the next time."

The 1986-87 budget is for $381m. Last year's $428m. budget included $60 million for Ethiopian Jewish immigration under Operation Moses. This year's budget includes an increase of $20m. for housing, principally for Ethiopian immigrants, and $25m. more to help alleviate the economic crisis taxing many rural settlements in Israel, with another $25m. planned for next year as well.

These allocations will be matched by grants from the government.

According to Jerold Hoffberger, chairman of the Agency Board of Governors, "This was the first Board of Governors meeting held in such an open manner. I think lay people there found it exciting to be able to participate in face-to-face discussions with the Agency leadership in an atmosphere of unity."

Asked if holding the meeting here was not a public relations gesture to increase the Agency's standing among U.S. Jewish leaders, Hoffberger replied, "I would not call it PR, but rather educational. What we were doing was hearing the concerns of our 'shareholders' and giving them a better idea where their contributions are going."

Lawyers to help Prisoners of Zion

MONTREAL (JTA). — An international council of lawyers who will "work relentlessly for the release of all the Shcharanskys and Mandelas now rotting in various prisons in the USSR and South Africa" has been established. This was announced by McGill University law professor Irwin Cotler, who represents various Soviet refuseniks and South African black nationalist prisoner Nelson Mandela.

IN BRIEF

Funds to merge

Jerusalem Post Correspondent
NEW YORK. — The Federation of Jewish Philanthropies and the United Jewish Appeal of Greater New York are to merge on July 1, it was announced last week.

The Federation, formed in 1917, has 130 agencies in Greater New York, serving about 1.7 million people with health care, social services, cultural and educational programmes. The traditional leaders of the Federation have been the city's veteran German-Jewish families, such as the Schiffs, the Sulzbergers and the Warburgs.

UJA, founded at the outset of World War II, has tended to be the province of East European Jews. The two organizations remained separate throughout the 1950s and 1960s, while Federations and UJA were combining in other cities throughout the U.S.

Warning against narrow attitude

NEW YORK (JTA). — The challenge facing Jewish community-relations agencies in the U.S. is "whether we are ready once again to assume the responsibility of arousing what is best in the American people: their compassion, their understanding, their belief in the American creed."

This was stated by Jacqueline Levine, outgoing chairman of the National Jewish Community Relations Advisory Council, at the council's annual plenary meeting here late last month. Michael Pelavin was elected to succeed her.

Levine said that the American Jewish community's continuing liberal stances and voting patterns on such issues as affirmative action, abortion, prayer in the public schools and domestic social programmes "grow out of a Jewish experience reflecting 3,500 years of Jewish survival."

She asserted: "Out of our anxiety about that very survival and out of our Jewish value system emerges our instinctive understanding that conditions which threaten the fundamental rights of any individual in society pose a special threat to Jews."

Levine pointed to what she regarded as the dangers in restricting the Jewish community-relations field's interests and activities to concern for Israel and for Soviet Jewry and other threatened Jewish communities. "Were we to do so," she said, "we would run the risk of starving the very soil of the country and culture in which we have set down our roots, which has enabled us to grow strong and influential as advocates on behalf of Israel, and which today helps us to sustain our hard-won standing in this society."

Nazi denied bail

NEW YORK. — Accused Nazi war criminal Walter Kutschmann will not be granted bail by Argentine authorities pending a decision on a request for extradition by the German Federal Republic, according to information received here by the Latin American Affairs Department of the anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

Kutschmann was denied bail by an Argentine court and the decision has been upheld by that nation's Federal Appeals Court.

He is accused of having directed the mass murder of 1,500 Polish Jews and the assassination of 20 Jewish professors in Poland and 18 members of their families.

The Jewish World is edited
by Moshe Kohn

FROM TNUVA WITH A 15% DISCOUNT

	List Price	Sale Price
TNUVA BUTTER
Butter (100 g.)	NIS 0.46	NIS 0.39
Butter (200 g.)	NIS 0.88	NIS 0.75
Salted Butter (200 g.)	NIS 0.88	NIS 0.75
Dutch Flavour Butter (100 g.)	NIS 0.50	NIS 0.43
TNUVA QUALITY CHEESE
Tal Ha'emek (sliced)	NIS 7.51 /kg.	NIS 6.38 /kg.
Gilead (sliced)	NIS 10.50 /kg.	NIS 9.00 /kg.
Harduf (200 g. "sausage")	NIS 2.32	NIS 1.97
Eli'Eza-Feta 1 kg. (Goat's Cheese)	NIS 7.70	NIS 6.55
Fromez (200 g. "sausage" or box)	NIS 2.20	NIS 1.87
Feta (Sheep's Cheese) (By weight - 15 kg. keg)	NIS 9.48	NIS 8.06

Reduction offered for limited time only.

The New North

Azorim is proud to announce the start of construction of the Azorey Chen housing development.

Entering Tel Aviv from the north, you can't miss "The New North Tel Aviv" – Azorey Chen – now taking shape.

More than change the map of Tel Aviv, Azorey Chen will change accepted "quality of life" standards.

You can expect only the most exceptional quality in the planning and finish of the apartments, the design of the buildings, maintenance services, landscaping, the neighbourhood sports club and other community services.

Now, while the facts are emerging, get yourself a good place to live – in Azorey Chen, "The New North Tel Aviv."

Azorey Chen – one step ahead.

Azorey Chen

The New North Tel Aviv

An Azorey Chen sales representative will be glad to tell you what the future holds for you in Azorey Chen.

Meet us at the building site in the new North Tel Aviv:

Sunday–Thursday, 10.30 a.m.–6.00 p.m.

Friday, 10.30 a.m.–1.00 p.m.

Saturday, 10.30 a.m.–5.00 p.m.

Full details from the main sales office of the project: 5 Druyanov Street, Tel Aviv, (open till 10 p.m.), Tel. 204705, 295222, ext. 372

Is Now

Taking Shape

AZORIM

Azorim Construction (1965) Ltd. A member of the Clal Group
6 Kaufmann Street, Beit Gibor, Tel Aviv, Tel. 03-630440

Solel Boneh Ltd.,
Central Region

The site is open to visitors on Saturday.

'We're still investing in the past'

When the moshavniks built fancy houses during the years of prosperity, I was not envious of their economic success. When the kibbutzim decided to add on rooms to the houses that were built in the 1950s and 1960s - and put up new public buildings and sports facilities to boot - I was willing to make do with my own three-room flat. And when engineers at Elscint were making $3,000 a month, I was willing to hold my peace about the meagre wages paid to journalists.

While the Eisenberg group took over companies here and boosted their value through market speculations, instead of investing more of their money in the economy, I was willing to let them and others enjoy the designation of "financial wizard."

During this time I kept paying my taxes - which are dutifully deducted at source - a burden which got heavier and heavier as inflation kept pushing people like me into higher tax brackets.

This same inflation enabled speculators to make a killing on the stock market or through monetary manipulations, and encouraged others, such as farmers and exporters, to use subsidized government credit to make fat profits. Money was also made then by diverting this cheap credit for purposes other than which it was intended.

But now that the rest of the world is poised for an economic leap forward, facilitated by the steep drop in fuel prices, Israel is absorbed in licking the (self-inflicted) economic wounds which result from the failures of its artificial prosperity. Israel is now using the meagre investment resources at its disposal not for growth, but for propping up tottering enterprises. While the rest of the world has started to invest in the future, Israel is still investing in the past.

OPINION

SHLOMO MAOZ

One of the arguments now heard from those rushing to the aid of faltering enterprises, is that without a new infusion of government cash, the "flagships" of the economy are in danger of sinking; the high-tech leader Elscint, the mainstay of the construction industry Solel Boneh, and the farmers who pioneered in settling the land. Their main worry is that the capital sunk into these sectors over the decades is in danger of going completely down the drain.

Now, it may be true that past investments are threatened, but if we follow this line of reasoning, only the firms in danger of sinking will be helped by government aid.

That, however, is no way to turn the economy around. Those now waiting in line for government hand-outs, should once and for all learn a lesson taught to our forefathers long ago: that you must put something aside during the fat years to tide you over during the lean years.

The hapless taxpayer must not be roped into paying to keep the "economic wonders" of yesterday from going under.

But if the government does decide to sink more money into firms that just might have a chance or that must be kept going for social reasons, then it should consider nationalization as an option.

This need not be a dirty word, if we keep in mind that the money that would be used to bail out these firms comes from the people and belongs to the people. This would at least prevent a re-occurrence of the scandal of using the taxpayers' money to prop up the banks and their inflated shares.

Fines cut for late payment of NI

Employers and the self-employed who are tardy in paying their national insurance dues face reduced fines as of this week.

The fine has been reduced by 0.5 per cent, to 1 per cent of the dues weekly. It is to be adjusted every few months according to changes in bank interest rates. The 3% penalty for those over 90 days late will be cancelled.

Section of the Blue Leaf exhibition of economy products by Delta. (Ran Erde)

Delta's products won't be cheaper in London any more

By GREER FAY CASHMAN

Jerusalem Post Reporter
"You don't have to shop in London any more to pay less for our products," Delta director-general Dov Lautman told reporters at a news conference in Tel Aviv this week.

He was alluding to the regular Israeli onslaught on Marks and Spencer, where Israeli made goods cost less than they do at home.

As a kick-off to its 10th anniversary celebrations in July, Delta is launching an aggressive Blue Leaf marketing campaign; what this means to the consumer is the chance to buy Delta merchandise in Israel at M & S British prices.

Items manufactured within the Blue Leaf range will be modified slightly to bring down production costs, and thus prices. But, according to Lautman and Delta sales manager Oriel Elitzur, quality will not suffer.

The Blue Leaf collection of cotton T-shirts, socks and underwear for men, women and children will be sold mainly through supermarkets. Lautman wants his product lines displayed alongside the bread rather than the blue jeans.

Delta's more expensive items will be sold under a Green Leaf logo in department stores and other clothing outlets.

The local market last year accounted for only 5 per cent of Delta's $57 million worth of sales. (The figure includes $5.6 million in sales by Arad Towels, a Delta subsidiary.)

An export-oriented company, Delta's best market is Britain, which accounts for 39 per cent of the company's sales turnover. Sales to M & S last year totalled £11 million.

In 1985, the company made its first export venture to the U.S., chalking up sales of $4 million, mostly through manufacturing under the Bill Blass label. Delta's client list this year includes Calvin Klein.

Lautman forecast a significant increase in exports for 1986, but would not commit himself to a figure.

Of the 2000 workers employed by Delta, 25 per cent are engaged in quality control. In the past year, the company, which has its headquarters in Carmiel, has taken on 150 additional workers, many of them former Ata employees.

War on Purim 'contraband'

By AARON SITTNER

Inspector teams from the Ministry of Industry and Trade this week began their annual "search-and-destroy" drive against dangerous Purim toys and costumes by visiting warehouses of importers and manufacturers.

Last year, according to the ministry, "substantial quantities" of hazardous costumes and other articles were seized because they did not conform with the standard as set by the Standards Institute.

The "contraband" included costumes and masks made of inflammable materials, fire crackers, toys containing explosive materials, detonators, spring-loaded items and self-propelled fireworks "missiles."

According to the ministry's rules it is illegal to import, manufacture or sell toy pistols or guns "that so closely resemble real weapons that their appearance in public could result in alarm, or any article that ejects a body of flame or a liquid, or whose discharge causes a dangerous air blast."

The ministry's drive against dangerous costumes and other Purim articles is being carried out in conjunction with Israel Police, the Customs authorities, local authorities and the Ministry of Education and Culture.

END OF LINE - Iran has abandoned plans to build a $2 billion pipeline aimed at providing it with a safe oil outlet in the face of devastating Iraqi attacks on Kharg Island export terminal.

The pipeline would have had a capacity of 1.5 million barrels a day on completion.

Plan for cheap freight service sails into fierce opposition

By YA'ACOV FRIEDLER

Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA - Plans for a "price-cutting" new freight service between Israel and Europe, using Bulgarian freighters in part, are unlikely to be put into operation. The Jerusalem Post learned yesterday. The plans had been raised by the Trans-Clal company.

Apparently the Bulgarians, Trans-Clal and the potential users - the importers and exporters - have all developed cold feet in the face of fierce opposition from the unions and the Histadrut.

Trans-Clal, a subsidiary of the Clal concern, informed users that it would introduce a cheaper freight service this month, to compete with the "cartel" operated on the Israel-Europe routes by Zim, the Israeli-owned Iscon company and four foreign shipping lines. These established a uniform freight rate 18 months ago, after fighting a price war for several years.

The Bulgarian shipping line, according to the Clal scheme, would have carried the cargoes between Europe and Cyprus; a feeder vessel would have been sent between Cyprus and Israel.

The seamen and the Zim staff immediately raised vigorous objections to a Histadrut-owned company such as Clal employing ships of a country that refuses to recognize Israel, and that will not sail all the way to this country, to undercut the national shipping company and jeopardize Israeli jobs on shore and at sea. The Zim staff appealed directly to the premier on the matter, and the Labour Council vowed to have all cargoes carried by the new line boycotted by the stevedores in Haifa and Ashdod.

Meanwhile, the deputy director of the Bulgarian company, Peter Doikov, denied in an interview with the trade journal, Lloyd's List, that his firm would "establish a shipping connection" with Israel. This denial reinforced local objections. As it grounds that Israel should not give custom to a company that will not come here openly.

Yesterday Arye Mehoul, director of the Shippers Council, which represents the importers and exporters, told The Post that he had "reservations" about the scheme.

While he supported free competition on the sea, and welcomed outsiders who might reduce cartel rates, the 10 per cent reduction Clal had offered was not attractive, he said. The need to switch carriers in Cyprus, with the ensuing delays and hazards, might outweigh the advantages of so small a reduction.

The Post learned that the idea of these developments the scheme is likely to be "quietly" abandoned.

Number of jobless drops in February

By TSIPPI KUPER

and LEA LEVAVI

Fewer people were unemployed in February than during the preceding month, according to Employment Service figures released yesterday.

The figures showed a slight decline in the number of job-seekers: some 47,000 registered at the labour exchanges during February, 5,000 fewer than in January.

The number of unemployed - people who registered as job-seekers at least six days during the month - fell from some 27,000 in January to 25,000 in February.

The National Insurance Institute reported a five per cent rise in the number of people requesting unemployment benefits. Some 25,000 requests were recorded in February, of which 5,000 were new and 20,000 were from preceding months.

Meanwhile, Aliza Tamir, a member of the Histadrut Central Committee and head of the Histadrut Employment Committee, complains that the huge cash reserve in the National Insurance Institute's unemployment fund should be used for retraining. She also said that employers should be required to pay workers a decent minimum wage, rather than sending them to National Insurance for supplemental income.

Yoram Barzilay, head of the Histadrut's Social and Economic Research Institute, said a study covering 14 firms showed that neither employers nor staff committees recognized the importance of retraining workers for new technologies. As a result, many workers would be out of jobs, because nobody trained them in time for new work. The country's retraining capacity, despite all the talk, is only 15,000 at any one time, he added.

Shipyard wants to sack 200 workers

By DAVID RUDGE

HAIFA - Israel Shipyard's new general manager, Ze'ev Almog, yesterday began negotiations with the works committees over a plan to revitalize the plant. He informed them that the proposals will involve the dismissal of at least 200 workers.

The yards have work in hand for up to three months and Almog promised to try to get new orders. He is also trying to interest a U.S. company to buy into the plant.

An $800,000 contract to construct chimneys for the Electric Corporation and an order for missile boats from an Asian country were lost because of the recent 2 month-long closure of the yard.

Meanwhile Shipyard's receiver Amram Blum has asked the U.S. Navy for an extension of its March 15 deadline of the tender it has issued for the purchase of a dry dock. The yard has been unable to prepare its detailed bid in time because of the problems there.

Unions set up team to study new wage policy

TEL AVIV - A team of trade union heads assembled by Histadrut trade union department chairman Haim Haberfeld is to oversee negotiations beginning next week for a new public-sector wage agreement.

ONE-ON-ONE CROSSWORD

ACROSS

- 1 All's busy changing course (8)
- 5 Stormy outcry of a babyish nature (6)
- 9 Readiness to accept whatever life has to offer (8)
- 10 An afternoon service the abstainer takes comfort in (3-5)
- 11 Sonorous bombast about one's transformation (8)
- 12 In the diocese of Winchester it runs one church in ten, apparently (6)
- 14 Three gifted sisters literally turn to pieces in Thebes (3, 7)
- 18 A Pole outwardly dressed like a soldier, but kept in the dark (10)
- 22 Flighty fruit-eater with an enormous bill to face (6)
- 23 Stand underneath a 20, maybe (8)
- 24 Makes correct conclusions about the Middle East (6)
- 25 One who falsely pretends I'm after foreign gold (8)
- 26 Great figures, but the Olympics proved too much for them! (6)
- 27 A song of praise about a thing that is abhorrent (8)

DOWN

- 1 Moving experience for those who follow the game (6)
- 2 & 19 Final salvo to celebrate news (6, 6)
- 3 Having some complaint, I brought in a fish (6)
- 4 A man whose bravery has never been recognised (6, 4)
- 6 A search I start on a controversial problem (8)
- 7 One who believes in art for art's sake (8)
- 8 Can one last out as a classical scholar? Yes (8)
- 13 In the main he has a higher rating (4, 6)
- 15 Not quite out of place as the result of a division (8)
- 16 Malignant quints; I direct to the National Trust? (8)
- 17 Intermittently switch positions (3, 5, 2)
- 19 See 2
- 20 Astute sort of tribute to a distinguished citizen (6)
- 21 She brings to mind the splendour of 6 (6)

GENERAL ASSISTANCE

EMERGENCY PHARMACIES

Jerusalem: Bakshi, Mahane Yehuda, 223761; Salah Eddin, 272315; Shu'fat, Shu'fat Road, 810108; Dar Aidawa, Harod's Gate, 262058.
Tel Aviv: Lev Ha'ir, 68 Ahad Ha'am, 613662; Kupat Holim Clalit, 7 Amsterdam, 225142.
Netanya: Hadassah, 24 Herzl, 22243.
Haifa: Yevne, 7 Ibn Sina, 672288.

DUTY HOSPITALS

Jerusalem: Bikur Holim (pediatric), Hadassah Ein Karem (internal, obstetrics, surgery, ophthalmology, E.N.T.), Hadassah Scopus (orthopedics).
Tel Aviv: Rokah (pediatrics, internal, surgery).
Netanya: Laniado (obstetrics, gynecology, internal, surgery, pediatrics).

FIRST AID

Magen David Adom emergency phone numbers (round the clock service).
Ashdod 41333
Ashkelon 23333
Bat Yam 591111
Beer Sheva 74767
Carmiel 388565
Dan Region 781111
Eilat 7233
Hadera 22333
Haifa 512233
Holon 36333
Holon 363133
Jerusalem 523133
Kiryat Shmona 44334
Mahariya 923333
Netanya 23333
Pessah Tikva 923111
Petach Tikva 451333
Rishon LeZion 942333
Safed 30333
Tel Aviv 240111
Tiberias 90111

Mobile Intensive Care Unit (MICU) service in the area around the clock.
"101" Emergency phone number in most areas.
"Ezer" - Mental Health First Aid, Tel: Jerusalem 227171, Tel Aviv 281112, Haifa 672222, Beer Sheva 418111, Netanya 36316.
Rapo Crisla Centre (24 hours), for help call Tel Aviv, 234819, Jerusalem - 245554, and Haifa 88791.
Jerusalem Institute for Drug Problems, Tel: 663526, 663592, 14 Bethlehem Rd.

OTHERS

PETAH TIKVA, Kir Ganim, exclusive, luxurious villa, Anglo-Saxon, 03-900479.

SITUATIONS VACANT

FOR SHIFT WORK with Tel Aviv communications company; intelligent person with complete command of English, quality typing; telefax operation desirable; additional languages, an asset. Tel: 03-233558.

GIDEON OBERSON, RAMAT GAN. Patient center with leading suit experience. Tel: 03-7516279, 5 day week.

POLICE

Dial 100 in most parts of the country. In Tiberias dial 244444, Kiryat Shmona 4444.

FLIGHTS

24-Hours Flight Information Service: Call 03-9712494 (multi-line), Arrivals Only (Taped Message) 03-381111 (20 lines)

QUICK CROSSWORD

ACROSS

- 1 Clock
- 4 Transquility
- 8 Correct
- 9 Set-back
- 10 Brave

DOWN

- 11 Rink
- 12 Whiz
- 13 Loud noise
- 14 Filled collar
- 15 Still
- 16 Egg-shaped
- 17 Incessant
- 18 Passage
- 19 Bird of prey
- 20 Card-game
- 21 Assorted

Yesterday's Solution

ACROSS: 1 Night, 2 Bachelor, 3 April, 4 Unhappy, 5 Slit, 6 Egg, 7 Fraile, 8 Artist, 9 Tap, 10 Apoca, 11 Stallion, 12 Dasher, 13 Scumpled, 14 Club, 15 DOWN: 1 About, 2 Score, 3 Medal, 4 Morocco, 5 Impolite, 6 Hostess, 7 Proposal, 8 Discreet, 9 Lot, 10 Sep, 11 Astute, 12 Slime, 13 Fly, 14 Anode.

ADVERTISING RATES

CLASSIFIED SECTION: Monday/Wednesday. Minimum 8 words. NIS 12.88; each additional word, NIS 1.61. Friday and holiday eves. minimum 3 words. NIS 17.52; each additional word, NIS 2.19. WHAT'S ON: NIS 6.90 per line. Daily, NIS 138 per line per month. ALL RATES INCLUDE VAT.

DEADLINES: At our offices - Jerusalem, Monday/Wednesday - 10 a.m. previous Monday/Wednesday - 5 p.m. on Wednesday; Tel Aviv and Haifa - 12 noon, 2 days before publication. Ads accepted at offices of The Jerusalem Post (see masthead on back page) and all recognised advertising agencies.

HOUSEKEEPING & CARE of children.

including living quarters. Excellent conditions. Tel: 03-476719.

ENGLISH SPEAKING AU-PAIR required.

English speaking, 18-25 years old, experienced, willing to work in a family environment. Tel: 03-31992, Morris.

SITUATIONS WANTED

ENGLISH MOTHER TONGUE, fluent Hebrew, seeks clerical post Netanya-Herzliya area. Tel: 03-31992, Morris.

CATERING

DELICIOUS TOP CLASS food services and catering. Gitan kosher. Tel: 03-762825.

Israel isn't Indianapolis

Motoring is not a sport. Certainly not a contact sport. Daredevil drivers in Israel don't get prizes for winning races. So you overtake the cab on a curve darting back into your lane just before the oncoming bus. Congratulations. You speed up and beat the red light. Big deal. Nobody's going to carry you to the winner's circle. To the hospital - maybe. Please drive carefully.

Arrive Alive!

MARKET PLACE

DAVID RUDGE

Judicial juggling act

HAIFA. — Attempts by the management of the Vulcan Foundries here to resolve aspects of the virulent strike at the Bayside factory through the magistrate's courts has added new dimensions, with widespread implications for industrial relations, including the role of the police in labour disputes.

The forces of law and order have played a peripheral part in previous disputes, taking action only when troubles at recession-hit businesses have spilled onto the streets, as in the case of the Israel Shipyard workers recently.

For the most part, these close encounters of the physical kind have stopped short of violence, due mainly to the restraint exercised by police on the instructions of senior officers.

There is a growing fear, however, that the guardians of the peace might soon find themselves embroiled, albeit unwillingly, in an altercation with the Vulcan strikers — a clash which has so far been avoided by virtue of a judicial juggling act.

The issue revolves around the closure of the factory gates, which the workers have welded shut and barricaded in defiance of a magistrate's court injunction, issued at the request of management.

The striking employees, who have the support of the Haifa Labour Council, maintain that their action is a legitimate response to management's rejection of their demands for the reinstatement of 13 sacked colleagues, pending renewal of negotiations over severance payments.

Management contends that the lock-out imposed on them by the workers is illegal and transgresses "normal strike practices." As agents of the owners, the Urdan company, they say they should be allowed free access to the plant to safeguard the millions of dollars worth of equipment belonging to the firm.

According to legal sources, management has a good case, although much depends on the attitude of the magistrate concerned. In similar incidents, notably at the Ata textile plants and more recently the Israel Shipyard, workers also staged sit-ins, but the courts did not order action against them.

In the case of Vulcan Foundries, a request for an order to reopen the gates, by force if necessary, has been made.

The workers have subsequently promised to abide by an order if one is issued and, as a "gesture of goodwill," have reopened the pedestrian entranceway.

Meanwhile, allegations and counter-allegations continue to flow back and forth between management, the workers and the Labour Council.

The council has accused the company of trying to undermine the democratic rights of workers by resorting to court injunctions, effectively bypassing established labour dispute procedures.

Management rejects the charge, saying the workers and the council are to blame for the present impasse by refusing to accept the economic facts of life. They maintain that a company which ran up losses of $1.5 million last year cannot afford to pay the "exorbitant" compensation being demanded by the workers.

Vulcan Foundries general manager Alex Ferling said 18 months ago when the Histadrut-owned Koor concern sold the factory to Urdan, losses were nearly $6m. a year. Koor had taken the "easy way out" by selling the firm, instead of implementing efficiency measures which would have resulted in widespread dismissals.

The workers, he charged, had been used to "blackmailing" management and getting away with it, but such an attitude could no longer be tolerated.

Despite the recriminations, senior Histadrut officials are in contact with management of the Clal concern, of which Urdan is a subsidiary, in an attempt to resolve the dispute. The labour federation, through Bank Hapoalim, holds 40 per cent of Clal's shares.

For their part, the police would welcome a compromise that would absolve them from the prospect of direct involvement in the wrangle.

They are loath to see what is ostensibly a labour dispute deteriorate into a confrontation with workers, especially as the general police policy is one of non-intervention in industrial quarrels unless there is a threat to public safety.

Nevertheless, the police would be obliged to enforce a court order if one is issued — an act which would be likely to have widespread repercussions.

New flat sales seen on the upswing

By YITZHAK OKED

TEL AVIV. — An increase in the sale of new apartments in February over January — from 354 to 406 — has been noted by nine of the biggest building companies.

Emanuel Cogan, a past chairman of Maldan, the Real Estate Brokers Association, told reporters this week that after a long slump there are indications now that people are starting to buy again. He added that till now there had not been any considerable increase in the price of new apartments due to the slump. He thinks, however, that if the buying trend keeps up and increases over the coming months, prices may rise considerably.

Maldan today has a membership of more than 400 real estate brokers. During a special study day for economic affairs correspondents last week, Mordchai Peles, the current chairman, complained that the government was not doing enough to regulate the industry. "Today anyone can be a broker. This harms the professional brokers and in the long run is detrimental to customers too."

He thinks that only about 25 per cent of real estate transactions go through brokers, as compared to 90 per cent in the U.S. and other western countries. According to his estimate more than 1,000 persons are working as full-time real estate brokers, and many more work part-time.

Peles added that brokers in Israel on the average charge 2 per cent of the sale price from the buyer and another 2 per cent from the seller. In the U.S. the broker's fee is 6-7 per cent, usually paid in full by the seller.

Prof. Uriel Reichman, dean of the faculty of law at Tel Aviv University, who is a member of a committee which is now trying to revise the laws concerning the purchase and sale of real estate, advised that until the present laws are changed, buyers should demand a bank guarantee from the contractor.

Reichman said that he personally is in favour of changing the laws so that they will be in line with American laws.

This would mean that banks gained greater control over contractors and would release money for construction in phases as the construction progresses. On the other hand, the banks would be held responsible for the customer's money, and not the contractor.

"Today, and this is the reason for the downfall of many in the building trade, contractors have too much money in their hands, which they are tempted to speculate with." On the one hand they receive money from customers while the project was still only in the planning stage. On the other hand they receive loans from banks for the project.

Reichman also criticized the current situation, in which the contractor's lawyer also does the legal work for the buyer. He said he would make it illegal for the contractor's lawyer to represent the buyer at the same time.

To encourage buyers to go to their own lawyers, he is going to propose to the Bar Association that fees in real estate transactions start at a lower scale than today. Until such a law is enacted, he strongly advises all buyers to arrange for independent legal counsel.

Reichman also revealed something that may not be known by many buyers of homes. The caveat posted by buyers at the land registry (Azhara be-Tabu) has a number of loopholes and does not always protect the buyer as fully as he thinks. As a rule of thumb, the closer a building is to completion the greater is the force of a caveat.

Tel Aviv Stock Exchange

MARKET STATISTICS

Indices:

General Share Index	105.43	+0.00%
Non-Bank Index	119.23	+0.29%
Arrangement	98.25	+0.12%
Insurance	127.37	+0.31%
Commerce, Services	120.27	+0.91%
Real Estate	139.80	+0.50%
Industries	113.41	+0.92%
Textiles	133.79	+0.94%
Metals	118.45	+0.13%
Electronics	94.94	+1.30%
Chemicals	110.22	+1.27%
Industrial Invest.	119.07	+1.33%
Investment Cos.	127.27	+0.03%
General Bond Index	98.59	+0.36%
Index-linked Bonds	98.50	+0.33%
Fully-linked	100.02	+0.26%
Partially-linked	98.20	+0.37%
Dollar-linked Bonds	96.54	+0.58%
Short-term 0-2 yrs	98.74	+0.33%
Medium-term 2-5 yrs	98.67	+0.40%
Long-term 5+ yrs	97.26	+0.42%

Turnovers:

Shares — total	NIS 9,060,300
Arrangement	NIS 2,988,400
Non-bank	NIS 8,961,900
Bonds — total	NIS 2,793,000
Index-linked	NIS 1,194,100
Dollar-linked	NIS 1,598,900
Treasury Bills	NIS 18,495,600

Share Movements:

Advances	182	(174)
of which 5%+	60	(64)
"buyers only"	17	(18)
Declines	126	(126)
of which 5%+	22	(33)
"sellers only"	14	(14)
Unchanged	97	(93)
Trading Halt	37	(46)

Bond Market Trends:

Index-linked	3% fully-linked	Stable/falls to 2%
--------------	-----------------	--------------------

4.25% fully-linked	Stable/rises to 3%
80% linked	Slight rises
90% linked	Stable
Double-linked	Stable/slight rises
Dollar-linked	Stable
Arran.	Rises to 0.5%
Rimon	Rises to 1.5%
Gilboa	Rises to 1%
For. Curr.	denominated
Treasury Bill	mixed to 2%
(monthly yield)	1.54% to 1.87%

Arrangement yields:

IDB ord.	14.13%
Union 0.1	13.76%
Discount A	14.29%
Mizrahi r.	14.18%
Leumi r.	13.88%
General A	13.50%
Leumi stock	14.15%
Fin. Trade 1	12.80%

SELECTED PRICE QUOTATIONS

Name	Price	Volume	%
General Share Index	105.43	—	—
Non-Bank Index	119.23	—	—
Arrangement	98.25	—	—
Insurance	127.37	—	—
Commerce, Services	120.27	—	—
Real Estate	139.80	—	—
Industries	113.41	—	—
Textiles	133.79	—	—
Metals	118.45	—	—
Electronics	94.94	—	—
Chemicals	110.22	—	—
Industrial Invest.	119.07	—	—
Investment Cos.	127.27	—	—
General Bond Index	98.59	—	—
Index-linked Bonds	98.50	—	—
Fully-linked	100.02	—	—
Partially-linked	98.20	—	—
Dollar-linked Bonds	96.54	—	—
Short-term 0-2 yrs	98.74	—	—
Medium-term 2-5 yrs	98.67	—	—
Long-term 5+ yrs	97.26	—	—

Commercial Banks

(not part of "arrangement")
Maritime 1	1026	3924	+4.1
General non-arr.	32500	137	-2.1
First Int'l	3441	3003	+1.2
RBI	3290	4195	—

Commercial Banks

(part of "arrangement")
IDB r	75500	195	-0.9
Union 0.1	58500	39	—
Discount	56000	582	—
Mizrahi	31035	417	+0.0
Hapoalim r	51580	916	+0.9
General A	133000	7	+0.8
Leumi 0.1	32580	1786	—
Fin. Trade	44600	—	—

Mortgage Banks

Leumi Mort. r	4280	1246	+3.4
Dev. Mort.	885	2360	-4.8
Mishkan r	1970	946	+8.2
Tefahot r	10700	36	-0.9
Merav r	2052	s.o.1	-5.0

Financial Institutions

Agric. CC	32001	3	+3.2
Ind. Dev. DD	63792	—	-0.4
Clal Leasing 0.1	6510	—	+5.0

Insurance

Ararat 0.1 r	3400	379	-8.1
Hesneh	2595	4208	-0.8
Phoenix 0.1	1225	—	-5.0
Hamishmar	5950	85	-2.5
Menorah 1	6850	70	+5.4
Sahar 1	3390	563	+9.9
Zion Hold. 1	11305	9	—

Trade & Services

Meir Ezra	no trading
Supersol 2	4400	271	-0.9
Delex r	4195	3645	—
Lighterage	9700	238	+1.0
Cold Storage	1027	1649	+10.0
Dan Hotels	3701	211	—
Yarden Hotel	—	—	+5.0
Hilon 1	11169	43	+5.0
Team 1	1550	317	-4.3

Real Estate, Building and Agriculture

Azoric	4030	2591	+5.1
Elion	1090	1073	-0.9
Africa Isr. 0.1	37000	137	-1.6
Deniker	3410	1629	+10.0
Prop. & Bldg.	2510	2387	-2.3
Bayside 0.1	3850	107	-2.5
ILDC r	no trading
Ressco r	4200	217	+5.3
Mahadrin	11200	190	—
Mahadrin	1100	5402	—

Industrials

Dubek b	2780	575	-1.1
Pri-Za 1	3579	2758	+0.3
Sunfrost	4921	s.o.1	-5.0
Elite	12910	2372	-8.8
Adger	633	11979	+10.1
Argeman r	6800	273	-1.5
Delta G 1	4270	461	—
Maquette 1	20837	61	+5.0
Eagle 1	11530	55	-2.5
Polgat 0.1	8590	388	—
Schoellerhain	12950	185	—
Rogoshin	2850	672	—
Urdan 0.1 r	12950	191	-0.4
Is. Can. Co. 1	978	3285	—
Zion Cables	2260	382	-5.4
Packer Steel	4940	159	+7.6
Elbit 3 r	39000	10	—

Investment Companies

IDB Dev. r	3365	3822	—
Elkann	2360	1425	+2.2
AFK 1	619	8729	+1.5
Gahelot	1300	29	+5.7
Israel Corp. 1	7457	323	+3.0
Wolfson 1 r	66000	—	—
Hapoalim Inv.	4090	808	-7.4
Leumi Invest.	5246	1189	—
Discount Invest.	2080	12894	—
Mizrahi Invest.	9346	43	+1.4
Clal 10	2438	1090	-0.1
Landeco 0.1	5690	28	-4.4
Pama 0.1	7960	257	+6.7

Oil Exploration

Paz Oil Expl.	10500	213	-4.4
J.O.E.L.	1170	755	—

Abbreviations:

s.o.1. sellers only	b. buyers only
s.o.1. buyers only	b. buyers registered

UNITED MIZRAHI BANK LTD.

NOTICE

In accordance with the terms of the prospectus published on August 31, 1982 in the matter of the bearing interest at a rate of 1/8 per cent annum above the arithmetic mean of the offered and bid rates for Eurodollar deposits in the London inter-bank market for six-month dollar deposits in a nominal amount of US$10,000,000, the Bank hereby gives notice that the rate of interest to be paid from March 5, 1986 to September 5, 1986 on the Deferred Deposit Certificates will be 7 1/8 per cent per annum. The aforesaid rate of interest was fixed by National Westminster Bank PLC, London, which serves as the Interest Determination Agent, based on information received from the London offices of four reference banks.

Issue of Registered Deferred Deposit Certificates, 1988-1990

5.3.86

TAMIT TOWER

ALL SUITE HOTEL

Elegant suites for rent and sale, with full hotel services and extraordinary facilities.

Special Introductory Rates

79 Hayarkon Street, Tel Aviv

Telephone (03) 651111, Tel. 371514, YMIT

Private tuition in

ART BOOKBINDING

Tel. 02-661572

02661-07 125

Israel Academic Committee on the Middle East

presents a seminar on

SOUTH AFRICA:

A community with a proud record faces an uncertain future

Prof. Simon Hartman

(Hebrew University)

The S.A. Political Situation, and its impact on the Jews

Dr. Gideon Shimoni

(Hebrew University)

South Africans in Israel

Moshe Borsuk, Chairman,

S.A. Zionist Fed., Israel

Today, March 5, 3 to 7 p.m.

Belgium House, Hebrew University,

Givat Ram campus. Registration:

NIS 4.

02661-07 125

FINANCIAL DATA ISRAEL EUROPE, U.S.

Israel Money Markets March 3, 1986

SHEKEL INTEREST RATES
PRIME BORROWING RATE: 1.75% per month
Unlinked Deposit (Annual Rates)

	LAST UPDATED	TAPAS	PAKAM 7-DAY	PAKAM 30-DAY
LEUMI	4.3	6-18%	7-17%	6-18%
HAPOLIM	20.2	8-18%	13-17%	13-17%
DISCOUNT	28.2	9-17%	9-17%	10-17%
MIZRAHI	18.2	12-18%	12-20%	12-18%
FIRST INT'L	20.2	8-18%	8-18%	8-18%

Rates vary according to size of deposit.
(TAPAS: demand deposit paying daily interest.
Pakam: fixed-term deposit available from 7 to 59 days.)

PATAH — FOREIGN CURRENCY DEPOSIT RATES (as of March 3)

	3-MONTHS	6-MONTHS	12-MONTHS
USD	7.250	7.250	7.250
STG	11.375	11.125	10.750
DMK	3.875	3.875	3.875
SFR	3.125	3.125	3.125
YEN	4.375	4.000	4.000

THE JERUSALEM POST

Ari Rath
Editor and Managing Director

Erwin Frenkel
Editor

Founded in 1932 by GERSHON AGRON, who was Editor until 1955; Editor 1955-1974
TED LURIE. Editor 1974-1975 LEA BEN-DOR. EDITORIAL OFFICES AND ADMINISTRATION The Jerusalem Post Building, Rehov Castelnau, P.O. Box 81
(4100) Telephone 551616. Telex 26121. TEL AVIV 11 Rehov Castelnau, P.O. Box 20126
(4100) Telephone 244222. HAIFA 16 Rehov Nordau, Hadar, Haifa, P.O. Box 4810 (31047) Telephone 445444. Published daily, except Saturday, in Jerusalem, Israel by The Jerusalem Post Ltd. Printed by The Jerusalem Post Press in Jerusalem. Registered at the G.P.O. Copyright of all material reserved, reproduction permitted only by arrangement.

Annexation's real danger

THERE IS no need to worry: Geula Cohen's bill calling for the application of Israel's law, jurisdiction and administration to Judea, Samaria and Gaza - their annexation, that is, to Israel - will be defeated by the Knesset today. Parliament will not, in a fit of absence of mind, tear up the country's solemn international obligations, and declare itself in effect binational.

That old politician vixen, Ms. Cohen, knows full well, however, that a sizable legislative phalanx, made up of Likud - mainly Herut - and religious party members, in addition to her own oppositionist Tehiya, would like nothing better than to renounce the Camp David accords, and with them Resolution 242. Early this week a Likud cabinet minister, Ariel Sharon, publicly urged outright annexation of the territories on the ground that the Arabs had rejected the autonomy for the Arab population in Judea, Samaria and Gaza, envisaged at Camp David.

So Ms. Cohen, thinking ahead to the next election, is out to embarrass the right-wing coalition parties, notably the Likud, by forcing them to vote down their most cherished convictions - unless they are willing to break coalition discipline, and let all political hell break loose.

Discipline must be maintained, Mr. Shamir has been telling his reluctant cohorts. But the issue, he has sought to explain to the Tehiya leaders themselves, is not one of principle, but of timing, and the timing of the Cohen bill is bad. The Likud is bound by the basic policy guidelines that rule out any change in the sovereign status of the territories during the life of the national unity government, except with the consent of both the Alignment and the Likud.

Were the Likud to support the bill, it would lose the right to the rotation - a glittering prize which Mr. Shamir, the premier-to-be, would not miss for the world.

The rotation: that's it. Not Camp David, for which Mr. Shamir does not care a hoot, except as a means of contrasting his own alleged solicitude for peace with the obduracy of the Jordanians and the Palestinians, who were not parties to the agreement signed between Israel and Egypt. Had the Jordanians and the Palestinians accepted - which in their own interest they might preferably have done - the idea of a five-year autonomy, Mr. Shamir would have been the last man to dance in the street.

It is not for nothing that the incumbent foreign minister would not endorse the Camp David accords when they came up for a vote in the Knesset over five years ago.

Would he - who trembles at the mere thought of a mild devolution of local functions to the Palestinians under Israel rule - have today re-endorsed Mr. Begin's original commitment to the election of a self-governing Palestinian authority in the West Bank and the Gaza District? Or to the IDF's redeployment of the IDF into specified security locations in the territories and to joint border control by Israeli and Jordanian forces? Let alone to settling the final status of the territories only through negotiations with the Egyptians, the Jordanians and the Palestinians on the basis of Resolution 242 - including the principle of the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by war - and the recognition of the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people and their just requirements?

Never. Were he to do so, he would be cast out in no time from his party's leadership.

But Mr. Shamir has plainly nothing of the sort on his mind. To him, no less than to Mr. Sharon, autonomy is useful only as a prelude to annexation. And not an indispensable prelude, at that: a future Likud government, he assured Ms. Cohen, would find the right time for annexation. It does not appear to have disturbed him that this would not only put paid to any hope of wider peace, but could serve as a legitimate excuse for Egypt to renege on its existing peace undertakings, and lead sooner or later to war.

Ms. Cohen seems to welcome the prospect. Her learned party colleague Prof. Yuval Ne'eman, has already advertised plans for Israel's territorial expansion after its next armed victory.

Unemployment - the truth

THE FEBRUARY figures on work seekers and recipients of unemployment benefits published by the Labour Exchanges purport to show that joblessness eased up somewhat in the last two months.

But statistics published on Monday by the Central Bureau of Statistics shows that during the whole of 1985 unemployment rose by 16 per cent compared with 1984, with nearly 100,000 people, or 6.7 per cent of the labour force, out of work. That was the expected result of the economic recovery programme, and there is no indication of any change in trend in the apparent fall in the number of work seekers in the last two months.

On the contrary, the coming months may produce a new wave of layoffs on a scale that could make the case of Ata or the Shipyards pale into insignificance.

Concern with soaring unemployment is no doubt one reason why Premier Shimon Peres is insisting on the renewal of growth. This is perfectly understandable, but the harsh truth must be faced that, in the short run, unemployment can only be reduced significantly by reversing the entire economic recovery programme - by funneling enough cash into the economy to increase domestic demand to its former levels. That would plainly be unacceptable.

If the policy of recovery is not to be completely overturned, the only prospect for reducing unemployment lies in a genuine renewal of growth - in creating new jobs instead of salvaging those that have been and still are being destroyed. It surely does not lie in coming to the aid of enterprises and sectors that, in addition to being mismanaged, have been forced to the wall by usurious interest rates.

But even genuine growth - for which the preconditions have not yet even been properly defined, and which depends on investment in the modernization of existing enterprises and the establishment of new ones - cannot create new jobs overnight. Some of it is, indeed, likely to be labour-displacing rather than labour-attracting. Facing the fact may be unpleasant, but it cannot be avoided.

POSTSCRIPTS

P.S. ICELANDIC publishers hope their recent Christmas book-buying spree heralds the return to a tradition which gave the island of 240,000 a reputation as the most bookish nation in the world.

Books have long been the favourite Christmas present in Iceland, and stores last December sold some 400,000. This represents almost two books for every man, woman and child on the Atlantic island.

Iceland vaunts publishing more books per capita than any other nation.

Two years ago, books seemed to be going out of style, elbowed out by videos. But Christmas 1985 saw book sales at a 10-year high.

Book prices are kept high by the tiny size of print runs, however, with the average price being $35.

Until the advent of television and radio, it was traditional for the head of every household to read out tales of the ancient champions during the long and dark winter nights in the small wood-rock-and-earth farmsteads in which most Icelanders lived.

But Icelanders are not just avid book-readers. Six daily newspapers serve to fill them in on current events, and magazine publishing on the island is at an all-time high.

The book-buying boom also coincides with a surge of interest in preserving the Icelandic language. Through 11 centuries of habitation, Iceland's language has remained virtually unchanged.

Theatrical court case

DAVID KRIVINE

THE DELIVERY of Ivan Demjanjuk into our hands is a mixed blessing. We have a duty to perform. He must be tried and, if found guilty of genocide, put to death in accordance with the law.

Justice will then be done; but that is all. There is no other benefit to be gained. More than 40 years have elapsed since his crimes were committed. Neither the courtroom proceedings nor his execution will bring a single one of his victims back to life.

An ordinary trial would suffice to give this Ukrainian lout his just deserts; but what we are likely to get is a show-trial. This would presumably have a wider purpose: to prevent a recurrence of the Holocaust by keeping alive its memory, by reminding the gentiles of the atrocities committed, by deterring future evildoers who will be made to see that murder does not pay.

Will these messages get across? I doubt it. At the beginning something had to be done, it was necessary to brief the gentiles about Hitler's bestialities. That was effectively achieved in the Eichmann trial. The world was shocked by its appalling disclosures and became duly contrite.

It continues to be contrite, but the effort is hard to keep up. The revelation of Nazi brutalities has gone on for a long time, perhaps too long. Contrition is beginning to wear thin.

THERE ARE two sides to our tragic ordeal as we present it. The side we Jews see is the cruelty of the oppressor, and at first that is what loomed largest for everybody. The other side is the terrible degradation of the Jews. Masochistically we keep harping on that theme, not realizing how it shames us.

We remind the foreigner at every twist and turn of things that should by now be allowed to fade in the mists of history: that many Europeans (not just the Germans) viewed us as an alien species; that they needed little coaxing to help get rid of us.

We expose our wounds to the strangers' gaze. We thrust in their faces pictures of our collective humiliation. What are we trying to do - arouse their pity? There is no glory in being trampled underfoot. Showing off our debasement endlessly can cause enervation. Our colloquists' sympathy gets to be overtaken by distaste.

It is time to lay off. Good gentiles know about the Holocaust by now and do not need to be reminded. Bad gentiles will not be disturbed by what we show them. On the contrary, their anti-Semitic appetites may be whetted by scenes of cruelty in the concentration camps; just as coarser elements everywhere find their sadistic feelings stimulated by films of violence, even though the malefactors are depicted as the villains of the story.

IF A SHOW-TRIAL is wrong for the gentiles, it is doubly wrong for the Jews, for it makes us bask in our own weakness. It exalts our traditional role as the passive victim, the perpetual underdog, the universal Aunt Sally.

Throughout the centuries we Jews were never able to fight back. When the enemy fell on us, all we could do was preach at him, berate him, reproach him for his inhumanity, call on his better feelings. It was a waste of breath: nations have - in their relations with each other - no better feelings.

We would be wiser to recognize the recurring pogrom each time for what it is: a Jewish defeat, a fashla, a failure for which, in the absence of anyone else to bear the burden, we must take full responsibility ourselves.

The cause of the slaughter must preoccupy us, not the slaughter itself.

self. Our dead must be mourned; that is indisputable. We feel a terrible kinship with them, because they are martyred for being what we are, for being Jews. But we cannot restore them to this earth, we cannot undo the horrors of the Holocaust. The one gift we can make them is to ensure that their martyrdom was not in vain, that it will not be repeated - that there will never be another slaughter of Jews.

The safety of our people depends on us, and only on us. Begging the stranger to be benevolent has never been the way. Yet we cannot shake the habit off. We choose the passive role, because that is what we were used to in the gola. We re-enact the past, re-live its agonies, wallow in self-pity, shake our fists against our fate and destiny. Cannot we see how ridiculous this is? We are like a pedestrian caught in a snowstorm who catches double pneumonia and curses the elements, blaming them for his ordeal.

THE WOES of the Jews under Hitler, however dreadful they seem to us, are not the world's most overwhelming preoccupation. This is what we fail to understand. Nations are not concerned with other people's sufferings, only their own. There are plenty of candidates for international commiseration - the Armenians, the Cambodians, the starving Africans. The Holocaust was worse? Sure it was, but nobody is listening.

So let us do our own thing for once. Instead of sermonizing our oppressors, let us quit their territory and live in our own country where we belong. When we are together we can do what other countries do: utilize our power as a nation-state to defend our rights. Jewish matters should cease to figure on the agenda of other governments; they are on our agenda. The ordeals we have undergone are our own affair. Our mourning is something private to us.

Dry Bones

IN THE SAME WAY Demjanjuk's court case is a domestic matter. We are not prosecuting the entire Ukrainian people, or Germany's Nazi regime, or any other corporate body. In the dock is one individual who is accused of murdering Jews. His trial should be open to foreign observers so that nothing is concealed. But there is no reason to turn these proceedings into an international spectacle.

Demjanjuk is a common criminal and should be treated like one. Instead, he is being blown up into a VIP. Television viewers watch his descent from a plane (as if he was Sadat), examine the cell in which he will reside, scrutinize his toilet bowl. A special tribunal will judge him in a special courtroom. Journalists, press photographers and TV cameramen are flocking in from the four corners of the earth. What for? The situation is getting out of hand.

The case should be handled in the regulation manner by a district judge in a district court, without theatricals. If the Jewish peoples want to commemorate Demjanjuk's downfall and that of his fellow-assassins, let it be by organizing the immigration of 50,000 Jews to Israel.

That is what our murdered brethren would have liked to see, and not a repeat technicolour performance over all networks for the umpteenth time - on this occasion in Treblinka - of their pain, their fear, their starvation, their emaciation, their humiliation and their destruction.

The writer is a member of The Jerusalem Post editorial staff.

READERS' LETTERS

ALIYA FROM SOUTH AFRICA

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, - Shlomo Avineri's article of February 2 is irresponsible and could lead to panic and confusion. There is no way that this sort of article can promote a positive aliya.

The South African Zionist Federation does its utmost to promote aliya of South African Jews. South African aliya, proportionately, is probably second to no other western country's aliya, as are the contributions that have been made to Israeli society by South African olim. It follows that Avineri's first proposed resolution to call on South African Jewry to come on aliya is completely unnecessary.

The second proposed resolution to set up a special "South African emergency task force" is to say the least ludicrous. South Africa is a free democratic country that has never prevented any Jew from fulfilling the mitzva of aliya. All that Avineri's article could succeed in doing, apart from causing panic amongst South African Jews, is worsen their position and damage the good relationship existing between Israel and South Africa, one of Israel's closest friends.

JOHN S. COHEN

Ra'anana.

THE RELEVANCE OF WORLD CRISES

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, - Having participated in the recently concluded 8th Plenary Meeting of the World Jewish Congress held in Jerusalem, I was distressed though not surprised to read an article in your paper by Moshe Kohn noting that some delegates complained that the agenda included a discussion of the foreign debt problems of the Latin American continent and the issues of democracy on that continent. Those discussions were led by some of the region's outstanding political figures, including Uruguay's Foreign Minister Enrique Iglesias, a leader of the Caratega group, and Senator Fernando Enrique Cardoso, one of Brazil's leading political figures.

I can only wonder whether those delegates who complained about these discussions might also not have seen the importance of discussions in 1930 of the debt problem, hyperinflation and the future of democracy in the Weimar Republic to the prospects for the Jewish people. Such parallels between Germany then and Latin America today are not outrageous and it is regrettable that some Jewish leaders continually fail to see the relevance of world crises to the well-being of both Israel and the Diaspora.

RONALD G. HELLMAN
New York.

IPO PRAYERS AT AUSCHWITZ

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, - I refer to Lea Chayen's letter of February 25 and I wish to state that the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra will not be performing a concert at Auschwitz within the framework of its forthcoming concert tour of Poland. It is clearly unthinkable that such a thing could ever take place. Unfortunately, Mrs. Chayen has been misled by incorrect information that was published in The Jerusalem Post on February 14.

Poland to honour the memory of the victims of the Holocaust. And it is quite natural for the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra, as a representative cultural institution of Israel, to want to go to Auschwitz to memorialize the victims in "Kaddish," and in "Psalm" by Ben-Haim. This is being carried out with the approval of Yad Vashem, Jerusalem.

ELCHANAN BREGMAN
IPO Board of Management
Tel Aviv.

KUPAT HOLIM

(Continued from Page One)
adopt efficiency measures in the health fund, with a "minimum of dismissals." Kassar said the reasons for the fund's difficulties were nothing less than a "national scandal." He said that the fund's debt had been $20 million less than 15 months ago, but it had risen to $200 million due to high interest charges in loans from commercial banks.

Gadish says that Kupat Holim's short term debt is $243m. In the past year, short term debts to Bank Hapoalim and Bank Leumi have increased by $95 million. These banks will be asked to loan this sum to the fund for 12 years at low interest rates, to reduce the short-term debt burden.

The banks will raise $100m. in the capital market to finance the debt rescheduling. The government will give Kupat Holim $15m. in direct aid. It will also purchase some 500 flats owned by the fund and will try to sell them to their present tenants. But it will be necessary to offer them mortgages at preferential terms.

Kupat Holim will be required to fire about 1,000 employees. It will also have to sell additional assets worth some $25m. The fund will have to increase membership dues and payments for medicines.

Payments for stays in rest homes and for dental treatments will also be raised. Rest homes that do not show profits will have to be sold.

Kassar said the fund's fees would not be raised for its poorest members. But other members would have to bear part of the burden, he added.

TABA TALKS

(Continued from Page One)
the talks. The shift was presumably based on fears that armed mutineers may still be hiding in the nearby desert.

A curfew is still in effect in Cairo, but it was reduced yesterday from 12 to 10 hours, starting at 8 p.m. An undisclosed number of mutineers are still at large, as are 300 of the 1,200 prisoners freed by the police rioters from a prison in South Cairo.

Although numerous foreign flags flew outside the El-Salaam yesterday, the Israeli flag was not among them. "It's not customary with the Egyptians to fly the national flags at these bilateral talks," said a spokesman for the Israeli Embassy.

Members of the two delegations chatted amiably with each other in the hotel lobby before entering the grand ballroom for the opening meeting. The Egyptian delegation, led by Dr. Nabil El-Arabi, head of the Foreign Ministry's legal department, sat in the centre, flanked by the Israelis and a small American delegation.

The negotiators later split into two committees, one discussing border problems, including Taba and 15 other disputed border points, and the other discussing bi-lateral relations.

The latter are expected to include the construction of a Coptic college in East Jerusalem's Shu'afat quarter. Israeli Ambassador Moshe Sasson this week met Egypt's Tourism Minister to pave the way for a visit by Tourism Minister Avraham Shafir to discuss Egyptian tourism to Israel and foreign tour packages that would include both countries.

ANGER IN HERUT

(Continued from Page One)
would probably be competing against him in the battle for the chairmanship of the all-important steering committee at the start of the convention.

The committee will eventually choose the party's new leader and the next Knesset list. Levy supporters maintained that Shamir and Arens had undemocratically tried to alter the internal election results by co-opting extra delegates representing different party sectors.

"Their attempt was foiled by the party court. They are the last people who should speak of democracy and the Mafia," a leading source in the Levy camp told The Jerusalem Post.

Rent-A-Car
FOR TOURISTS:
FROM $4 PER DAY
All cars new. Pick up and delivery free.
TAMIR, Rent-A-Car
8 Kikar Ha'Atzmaut, Netanya. Tel. 053-31831 (day) 053-25763 (night)

EGYPT
Daily bus
$25 - $20* - One way
$40 - $30* - Tel Aviv - Cairo - Tel Aviv
$73 - $63* - Tel Aviv - Cairo - Tel Aviv
+ 3 nights on B.B. basis
$79 - $69* - 4 days/3 nights on B.B. basis + panoramic tour
$125 - 4 days / 3 nights on half board - 2 days of touring in Cairo, Giza Pyramids
$320 - 8 days/7 nights on half board basis. Touring in Cairo, Luxor and Aswan. Deluxe hotels in upper Egypt.
All the tours are available in deluxe hotels
We'll arrange your visa (for Tourists) the same day (in Tel Aviv only) (subject to Consulate office hours)
SPECIAL OFFER FOR STUDENTS CAR & BACK - 3 NIGHTS HOTEL LOTUS* (TOWN CENTER) $54
Dollar rates for tourists.
* Weekend reduction or Youth Fare
Tel Aviv: 525 Haharmonim St. (03) 221372
(03) 2010000, 2001910, 2220100
Jerusalem: 3 Ben-Sion St. (02) 248585
Tiberias: (067) 20330, 20550
Haifa: (04) 334922
Galilee Tours

Taste of Passover Cookbook
What's cooking for Passover? This collection of kosher le'Pesah recipes takes you into the kitchens of Israel and uncovers some of the most imaginative and exciting ideas for Passover cooking.
The TASTE OF PASSOVER COOKBOOK was compiled from nearly 200 entries of a months-long countrywide cooking contest held last year, organized by The Jerusalem Post and The Sheraton Hotels of Israel. Published by The Jerusalem Post, softcover, 160 pages. The perfect gift.
NIS 9.20 incl. VAT
To: BOOKS, The Jerusalem Post, P.O.B. 81, Jerusalem 91000
Please send me TASTE OF PASSOVER COOKBOOK.
I enclose a cheque for NIS 9.20
Please send TASTE OF PASSOVER COOKBOOK as a gift, along with a gift card in the name of _____
I enclose a cheque for NIS 14.40 (includes NIS 5.20 airmail postage). I have enclosed the recipient
NAME _____
ADDRESS _____
CITY _____
CODE _____ TEL _____

סוכר מן האל